Beethoven and the King.
Money By Airplane.
Artistic Russia.
Phoning Across the Ocean.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE
(Copyright, 1927.)

THE French government recently celebrated officially the one hundredth anniversary of Beethoven's birth. Beethoven concerts were given, with representatives of the government attending. The fact that Beethoven was of German blood and that the Germans recently killed a good many Frenchmen, made no difference. The French have common sense.

THE two greatest Germans ever born, Beethoven and Goethe, were walking side by side, Beethoven with his head down and his hands behind his back. The King and Queen came walking in the opposite direction. Goethe stepped aside to let them pass, removing his hat. Beethoven walked straight ahead, the King and Queen separated to let Beethoven pass between them. Very likely he did not see them.

LONDON bankers are shipping gold by flying machine. It costs more than by railroad or steamship travel, but gold on its travels earns no interest. The time and interest saved by flying machine more than pays the extra cost.

ONE British airplane manufacturer, Sir Samuel Instone, says: "In one year we carried ten million pounds across the Channel." The interest on ten million dollars amounts to a great deal of money, even for a little while. We shall learn to use flying machines, commercially and for passenger traffic over here eventually.

We may even wish some day that we had taken the trouble to build a fighting air fleet.

RUSSIA is trying to make her people musically artistic, as we are trying to make ours SOBER by law.

The latest Russian regulation forbids sale of phonograph jazz dance records. Such music, Bolshevism says, is "bourgeoise music." That would puzzle African savages that danced to such music long before the bourgeoise was invented.

REGULATING the growth of human tastes, ideas and languages by law is one of the most harmful of human contrivances.

The Academy, that strictly limits and regulates the use of the French language, has made of French a most precise language, perfect for diplomacy, but has greatly diminished its beauty and power. The French of Anatole France cannot compare with that of Villon, and because German and English have developed without any academic straitjacket, both are far superior to French in beauty and in literature.

MANY Frenchmen of genius, to mention only Corneille and Racine, were hampered by the three classical unities of time, place and action, as much as a Chinese girl's feet by her little shoes.

Men, music, language and habits GROW and cannot be manufactured by arbitrary law.

YOUNG men and older ones interested in radio and science consider this interesting fact, supplied by Mr. Blume, the head of the great Western Electric Company, which spends more than ten million dollars a year in scientific laboratory experiments alone.

Mr. Blume's company supplies the mechanism for telephoning across the Atlantic Ocean. The telephoning must stop at 1 o'clock by New York City time, when it is 6 o'clock in London. The reason is that as the sun goes down and the shadows fall, talking through the air becomes difficult or impossible. Scientists do not know WHY that is. If you can tell why, you will add to human knowledge.

YOU read in a Kansas newspaper of the proud achievements of two dogs. In one night they killed 100 sheep, injured 200 others so that many of them will die, causing the farmer a loss of $2,500.

And the two dogs are worth considerably less than ten cents probably—except for soap fat.

There is intelligence lacking somewhere in a country that has more dogs than sheep, when the dogs are useless and the sheep keep down weeds and feed and clothe millions. This is a beautiful country.

TWENTY-TWO million automobiles are running in the United States now, and 5,000,000 more will be built by the end of 1927. If an ice age came upon us suddenly—fortunately ice ages never do that—the entire population of the United States could all travel South at one time in cars now running.

PLANE HEADS OVER SEA

HARBOR GRACE, Newfoundland, Aug. 27.—Edward F. Schlee, of Detroit, Mich., and William S. Brock, formerly of the United States air mail service, hopped off today for Londan, at 7:44 o'clock (Pittsburgh daylight time) upon the first leg of their round the world flight.

Weather conditions were favorable when the airmen in their monoplane Pride of Detroit rose from the runway of the Harbor Grave flying field admist the cheers of spectators.

Schlee, who is a wealthy oil operator, and Brock, who will pilot the plane, hope to establish a new speed record for passage around the world.

If they are successful in their non-stop flight across the Atlantic they will land at the Croydon airdrome just outside of London.

A northwest wind had prevailed during the night and there was a strong breeze favoring the flight when the Pride of Detroit rose from the field and headed out over the Atlantic.

The plane had arrived yesterday from Old Orchard, Me., and less than 24 hours was spent here by the fliers

Planes To Search for Redfern

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Preparations were being made here today by Edward Niramier, head pilot of the Biscayne Fliers, leading commercial aviation unit in these waters, to send three seaplanes to the Bahamas and as far south as Turks Island to search for the Port of Brunswick, the monoplane piloted by Paul Redfern, which hopped off Thursday from Brunswick, Ga., for South America.

By International News Service.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 27.—Despite the absence of news, Paul Redfern, the young American aviator who hopped off at Brunswick, Ga., to attempt a non-stop flight to this city, was believed to be somewhere off

NAB BOY BANDITS IN DEN WITH MAN CHIEF

Trapped in their lair in the cellar of a dilapidated frame house at 25 South Thirteenth street, early this morning, a band of boy thieves under the leadership of a man of 45 was rounded up, the police say, and a quantity of loot was recovered. One of the boys, a lad of 14, admitted stealing 14 automobiles, according to the jolice.

Although they probably never heard of Oliver Twist and the scheming Fagin, the young suspects and their leader rival these famous characters of fiction. Police dropped in on the band while they were "divvying up" the spoils of the night at a game of cards amid indescribable squalor and disorder.

The leader, Ben Thomas, 45, lived in the cellar with two of the boys, the police said. A back room was used as the sleeping quarters. It had a dirty straw mattress on a rickety bed covered with rags. In the front room were a small table, a stove and an oil lamp, and innumerable pieces of junk littered the place. Here the boys brought their loot after an evening's activity, according to the police.

The band's specialty was "rolling

'Can't Practice on Her' Says Girl Who Sues Boy After Dance

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Miss Katie Smith has announced that she was tired of having fellows who can't dance practicing on her.

Miss Smith filed suit against Artie Gardner in Small Claims Court for $10. She asks $6 for asserted damages done to her shoes when he danced with her at the Lonesome Club, and $4 for the "insult" of having her feet walked on.

"He walked all over my feet and ruined my shoes," she explained in filing her action.

TWO MEET IN GOLF CROWN FINAL

By DAVIS J. WALSH,
International News Service Sports Editor.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 27.—This, now, this moment and today, would seem to be the approximate time for all good morticians to come to the aid of Chick Evans. There probably were quite a few citizens over the length, bredth and width of this, our country, who were in need of a break this morning and Chick was several of them.

All he has to do is to play Bobby Jones, the fool-proof golfer, over 36 holes, or less, largely the latter possibly, in the final round of the national amateur championship. The writer, off-hand, can think of bigger and better pastimes than this. One might, for example, kick a policeman under the gullet, or try to borrow a bootlegger's dollar. Anyhow, Chick has spent a lot of his valuable time making himself eligible for this competitive punch on the beak.

Much of that questionable effort, for instance, was expended yesterday when Chick took part in 37 holes of heart-breaking golf to eliminate Roland MacKenzie, the Washington come-back. For if Chick were to be convinced that Jones couldn't lose today, or any other, he probably would prefer that Roland had sur-

FIREMEN ANSWER TWO CALLS TO SAME PLACE

Firemen from Engine Company No. 52 were summoned to the home of John Nolan, 1227 Dickson street, twice for fires this morning. A coal shed was discovered on fire and a still alarm was turned in at 3:½ o'clock. An hour and a half later, there was another fire in the same shed. Damage amounted to $50.

BOY FRACTURES SKULL IN PLUNGE DOWN ELEVATOR

Albert Marcus, 14, of 1415 Baize street, suffered a fracture of the skull late yesterday when he fell down an elevator shaft in a building at 103 Wood street. He is at the Allegheny General Hospital where his condition is said to be critical.

CANONSBURG BOY VICTIM OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS

CANONSBURG, Pa., Aug. 27.—Robert Stone, 10, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stone, has been stricken by infantile paralysis. Health authorities here have established quarantine which will be extended by the county against the neighboring sections of West Virginia and Ohio, where an epidemic of the disease is reported.

PAIR FOUND DEAD IN STOLEN AUTO

DETROIT, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Police today were without a clue to the identity of the bodies of a man and woman found under blankets in the rear of a stolen automobile on a downtown street here last night. Death, an examination revealed, occurred three or four days ago from bullet founds in the head.

The couple, police believe, were slain elsewhere and the bodies brought to the spot where they were found. Each apparently was about 40 years old and expensively attired.

All identifying marks had been removed from the couple's clothing except one label in the woman's coat. It bore the mark of Campen Brother, Clothing Company, Cleveland.

PROBE GANG WAR THEORY.

On the theory that the couple may have been identified with a recent gamblers war here in which three persons were killed and a number wounded, finger prints were taken but failed to tally with any on record at the Bertillon department.

The automobile, a large sedan, had been stolen from an electrician who was working yesterday at a hospital. The owner, who said the machine was stolen some time between noon and late yesterday afternoon, reported the theft last night nearly two hours before the bodies were found by two patrolmen walking their beat.

Space for the bodies had been provided by removing the rear seat. The theory that the victims had been murdered at some other place and then placed in the automobile was strengthened by the fact that little blood was found in the car.

EVIDENCE OF STRUGGLE.

Dr. Albert L. French, coroner, said that as each had been shot through the right eye, death probably had been instantaneous. The man's right hand was powder burned, leading police to believe that he had struggled with his slayer.

Two gun battles attributed to the gamblers' war have occurred here this week. Three persons were wounded, one in a revolver battle between occupants of taxicab and another automobile, and two others in a shooting affray in a near downtown hotel.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS KEEPS SCHOOLS CLOSED

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., Aug. 27.—Due to infantile paralysis in eastern Ohio, local schools will not open until September 15, the board of education announced today.

WANTS TO COME BACK

Chance To Repay, Is Bell Plea

"I started with a dollar and ran it up to $12,000,000. Today I am a broken man in health and body, but if given another chance I know I can make good and pay back every penny I owe."

John A. Bell, former millionaire coal operator, banker and political power in the state, made this statement in an interview at the Allegheny General Hospital, where he is a patient and prisoner. The former millionaire was convicted following the collapse of two of his banks in Carnegie December, 1925.

"I am the victim of a trumped-up charge of embezzlement. I never stole a penny in my life," Bell said. "The friends I befriended sent me to jail, but I hold no malice towards them. I forgive them. I never held any bitterness in my heart for anyone. That is the way I have lived and that is the way I want to die."

Bell is practically helpless. Following his conviction he suffered a paralytic stroke. But he appears cheerful. "I made good once. I know I can come back," he declared.

M'GOVERN TURNS QUIZ ON DAMAGE CLAIMS

In full control of the statistical records of the county commissioners' office, Controller C. C. McGovern today centered his probe of county finances on the amount of property damage claims pending settlement. Employes working on the statistical books of the commissioners must report to the controller and operate under his direction. No date for another hearing will be set until the controller's counsel has gone thoroughly into the damage claim question.

Six witnesses were called by McGovern yesterday. They were: Deputy Treasurer James L. Costello, Treasurer Samuel D. Foster, Statistician Gilbert C. Closman, Assistant County Solicitor William Jacobs, Commissioner E. V. Babcock and Stenographer Murray Schneider.

Foster declined to answer most questions, declaring his bookkeeper knew more about the matters involved than he did. McGovern

N. Y. WOMEN CRIMINALS TO HAVE LARGER PRISON

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Jefferson Market prison, the institution which has housed most of New York's notorious women criminals, is doomed to go. Benjamin W. Levitan, an architect, has completed plans for a new women's detention home which will supplant it.

The new building will house 530 inmates. It will cost $1,000,000.

Major Sidney W. Brewster, warden of district prisons, said Jefferson Market is entirely inadequate for the present needs.

Mitchell said arrangements had been made to hold the funeral in Chicago next Tuesday.

LOCAL GIRL FOUND WITH LOVE CULT LEADER

By International News Service.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27.—"Helen Thompson," claimed by Homer Thompson, head of an alleged "Love and health cult" here, as his daughter, was identified today by Frank Sala, Pittsburgh electrician, as his sister, when he saw the girl in the office of the United States district attorney.

The identification substantiated charges made by Thompson's wife that the girl had been a maid in the Thompson home in Pittsburgh and later had gone through a marriage ceremony with Thompson in Washington, D. C.

Thompson is held on charges of violating the Harrison narcotic act and sending obscene literature through the mails. He was arrested yesterday with the girl in an apartment here.

BERTAUD, BALKED AT START -:- AWAITS FAVORABLE WIND -:- TO SOAR FOR ROME

CLOSE WATCH

Pilot Bertaud, shown with Commander Hartley, Leviathan (right), maintains a close watch on weather reports and studies the ocean lanes which "Old Glory," William Randolph Heart plane, will follow to Rome.

BALKED

"Old Glory," in its hangar, whose pilot and navigator were disappointed at their scheduled starting time when bearings were found to be faulty. While mechanics replace the bearings in the huge ship, Bertaud and Navigator Hill await favorable winds to aid them in their long journey. Eris W. Densham, Bristol Jupiter motor expert, has worked on "Old Glory."

"THE CREW"

Pilot Lloyd Bertaud and Navigator J. D. Hill, "the crew" of "Old Glory" anl the two who hope to reach Rome on a non-stop flight from Curtis Field, New York.

WINDS AID FIRST LEG OF FLIGHT

before hopping off on the start of their long journey.

The plane was refueled last night and everything was made ready for the start this morning. Both airmen were up early eagerly scanning the sky and reading the weather forecast. They found flying conditions good and hurried out to the air field which is two miles from Harbor Grace.

28 DAYS IS AIM

Food was placed aboard the machine, although the men said that they did not expect to eat very heartily while crossing the ocean. The Wright whirlwind motor, which has already proved its metal as a transocean motive power in planes piloted by Byrd, Lindbergh and Chamberlin, was tested out and found to be working perfectly.

"We want to make this trip in 28 days or less to beat the record set last year by Wells and Evans," said Brock.

Schlee, although not a professional aviator, can run the plane and will act as co-pilot.

After overhauling the plane from tail to propellers Schlee and Brock decided to jump at once. The machine was already upon the runway, having been placed there last night, and was all poised for the hop.

"Let's go," said Schlee.

After climbing into the cockpit and closing the door the men waved their hands and the mechanics unlocked the wheels. The motor drummed steadily and the propellers carried the trim Stinson-Detroiter down the runway. After traveling part of the distance it began to rise. Its speed quickened and soon it was several hundred feet in the air. It seemed to be traveling at top speed in a due easterly direction.

The distance from Harbor Grace to Croydon Field, London, is 2,300 miles. The airmen planned to follow the steamer lane unless forced by storms to turn from this course.

SHOOT JUNKMEN TO AID UNION

By Universal Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—An entire city block was stormed by a crew of twenty gun-firing gangsters who shot up a meeting of junk peddlers, fatally wounding one of them, Max Braverman, 45, when he offered resistance.

The Peddlers had refused to join a union organization.

About the same time authorities started a search for "Lefty Louis," business agent for the Chicago Teamsters' Union, believed to have some connection with the fray.

The gunmen drove up to the scene of the shooting—a row of junk yards—in five touring cars, jumped out, and flourishing revolvers, ordered the Peddlers to join the union.

Their demands were rejected. Promptly they began firing into the air. Braverman, making a show of defiance, was shot down. Then the gangsters fled.

MOTHER AND CHILD HIT BY AUTO IN M'KEESPORT

Mother and daughter were injured when an auto crashed into them as they crossed Fifth avenue at Market street, McKeesport, late yesterday. Mrs. Armilla McGuirk, 27, of 103 Fifth avenue, McKeesport, was leading her daughter, Dorothy, 7, across the street when a machine, said by police to have been driven by Albert Paynak, 711 School street, Clairton, ran them down.

Edward F. Schlee is president of the Wayco Oil Company. He employed William S. Brock, air mail flier, as his pilot. Schlee, an amateur flier, will take his turn at the controls. They expect to cover their route in 210 hours, and they hope to break the existing record of 28½ days for the round-world journey.

The long water jumps, from Hongkong to Tokio, from Tokio to Sand Island, and Sand Island to Honolulu, will be guided by radio beacon.

NANKING FALLS TO SHANTUNG

PEKING, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Capture of Nanking, former seat of the Nationalist regime under Chiang Kai-Shek, is claimed for General Sun Chuan-Fang's Shantungese army today.

The name Nanking has been almost a shibboleth in the present Chinese internal struggle.

Holding sentimental value in the eyes of the Nationalists because it shelters the mausoleum of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, founder of the Nationalist movement, the city, situated on the south bank of the Yangtse river, also has considerable military strategic value as a railway terminus and as the "gateway" between Northern and Southern China.

FORD BUILDING DEPOT FOR AIR PASSENGERS

By Universal Service.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27.—What is believed to be the first passenger depot for air travelers in the United States is under construction at the Ford airport. It will be completed about September 20 and made available for pilots and passengers of all planes using the field.

The new building is designed to serve as a focal point for all air activities of the Ford organization. It will be leased by the Stout Air Services, Inc., for use as a ticket office and as a waiting room for the accommodation of passengers on sightseeing tours. In addition the depot will be of great usefulness for the three mail lines and for private fliers who use the field.

The second floor will include a glass-enclosed office for the port manager, radio beacon control room and an observation station.

QUIZ KLANSMAN IN JAIL

By Universal Service.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Aug. 27.—Veiling their mission in secrecy, two members of the grand jury visited D. C. Stephenson, former Klan grand dragon, serving a life sentence for murder in the state penitentiary.

They were Jurors John J. Madden and Harry J. Wangelin, accompanied by Deputy Prosecutor William H. Shaeffer. They are believed to have unearthed fresh documentary evidence, requiring confirmation from Stephenson, in the grand jury investigation of the contents of Stephenson's famous two mysterious black boxes.

REVOKED INDIAN'S GIFT TO WIFE ALREADY SPENT

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—Just how the Secretary of the Interior is to get $550,000 from the white wife of Jackson Barnett, said to be the world's richest Indian, looms as a problem. The Department of the Interior recently was made custodian of Barnett's wealth and two $550,000 gifts made by the 75-year-old Indian to Mrs. Barnett and to Bacone University of Oklahoma were revoked. Mrs. Barnett's daughter, Miss Lowe, is quoted as saying: "The money has been received and spent."

Search Island Hills For Missing Fliers

HONOLULU, Aug. 27.—(AP.) — Captain Paul Schluter, navigator of the monoplane Aloha, second prize winner in the Dole flight, was aboard the liner Sonoma bound for San Francisco today, richer by $1,000, which Pilot Martin Jensen's backers gave him. Schluter also has the promise of more money to be derived from sale of Jensen's syndicated newspaper articles telling the story of the flight.

Reports today from Maui indicated continuation of the search for the missing Dole flyers in the Nahiku hills, whence have come rumors that a wrecked airplane had been seen.

Naval officials at Pearl Harbor announced the Omaha and six destroyers will arrive Monday to refuel and take on provisions. They probably will depart Tuesday. The Holland or Ortolan, S-class submarines, will leave Monday for the mainland. Both groups will search the drift waters—the area wherein a plane would drift from the great circle course—as far as longitude 155.

REDFERN IS UNSIGHTED

the North Brazilian coast early today.

A dispatch from Para at 3:45 a. m. said:

"The Macara radio station reports it has been unable to get any word of Redfern."

Plans have been completed here for the welcome of the American aviator. If he arrives safely he will land at the military aviation field—Campo Dos Affonsos—22 miles from the city. The Brazilian military aviation school is located there.

It was estimated by Brazilian aviation experts that if Redfern was able to hold to his course and his schedule he should arrive between 4 o'clock and 9 o'clock tonight.

Should word be received indicating that Redfern would land before darkness, a squadron of Brazilian planes will go out to meet him and guide him to the landing place.

If it is seen that Redfern will not arrive until after darkness falls, powerful beacon flares will be turned on at each corner of the field as guides and the owners of parked motor cars nearby will be requested to keep the headlights of their automobiles turned on.

MAY BE OFF COURSE.

By International News Service.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., Aug. 27.—More than 40 hours after Paul Redfern had hopped off on his daring non-stop flight for Rio de Janeiro there was still no official word of his exact whereabouts early today.

It was expected that Redfern would be over Trinidad some time last night, if he had been able to hold to his course without accident, reaching Macara, Brazil, about midnight.

There is still no confirmation of the report from St. Petersburg, Fla., that a radiogram reported Redfern 450 miles east of the British Bahamas on Friday afternoon. This wireless message reported that Redfern was flying at an altitude of 2,000 feet.

It was pointed out here that if Redfern were 450 miles east of the British Bahamas, he would be off the course he had planned to follow when he hopped off here at 1:48 p. m., eastern daylight time, on Thursday. It was admitted, however, that the aviator might have veered from his course to avoid storms.

3 PITTSBURGH YOUTHS HELD

The possession of a stone wrapped in rags and newspapers, coupled with the fact that they were seen near a jewelry store early this morning, resulted in the arrest in Monessen of three young Pittsburghers. The men said they were Alex Alpern and James Fanella, of Fernando street, and Fred Christy, of Epiphany street. Monessen police say they were traveling in an automobile in which was found the stone, suitable for window smashing, a revolver and a set of steel knuckles. They were held for investigation.

Weather Conditions.

The Eastern high is centered over the Canadian coast this morning, and a ridge extends southwestward over the St. Lawrence Valley, the lake region and the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, but with considerably diminished pressure. The high is producing clear skies over the lakes and the central valleys. The barometer is falling rapidly along the Atlantic coast, producing heavy rains at New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, and light rains southward to North Carolina, and southward to New England. Cloudy weather is general over the Atlantic coast states.

In the West low pressure is dominating the weather. A low is centered over Manitoba, and a trough extends southward over the Dakotas to Texas and the Southwest. It is causing cloudy weather and scattered rains over the plains states.

The temperature changes were slight

Marilyn Miller, musical comedy star, remarked on taking ship for Paris and a divorce from Jack Pickford, her cinema-gracing husband, that it was easy to cut marital ties in the French capital. Now the Paris judges have turned their thumbs down against Marilyn's petitions. She'll try the French provincial courts.

brought out that $600,000 had been transferred from one fund to another before he took office and that three days after he assumed control an effort was made to replace the money.

Cloonan lost his temper and demanded "his rights" when McGovern intimated that he had withheld $1,250,000 in damage claims against the county from the last hearing.

Jacob's testimony dealt almost entirely with damage claims, as did Commissioner Babcock's. A great deal of time was spent by McGovern in getting the details of appraising property.

COUZENS WANTS TO DIE AT 65

By Universal Service.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 27.—Sixty-five years of life is enough so far as he is concerned, declared Senator James Couzens today. He will be 55 Sunday.

"I hope I do not live more than ten years longer," he added. "That would be about right. I will have had enough of life by then. This, of course, applies to me only. I would not presume to judge a span of life for others."

Senator Couzens has been in the Senate since 1922. Until 1915 he was secretary of the Ford Motor Company.

He is a very wealthy man. He is awaiting the outcome of the Federal Board of Tax Appeals' hearing on the assessment against him and other former Ford stockholders of many millions income taxes for profit made when they sold to the Fords. Couzens' assessment alone is ten million.

NAB BOYS IN DEN

drunks,' the police said. One of the boys is alleged to have told how two of the bigger youths held a victim helpless with booze, while one of the smaller boys went through his pockets. This took too many boys on one job, he said, according to police, and it was decided that the same results could be obtained by hitting the victim on the head with a stone and ransacking his clothing while he lay prone on the ground.

Hearings will be held on Monday in Morals Court.

The boys arrested said they were Stanley Triby, 19, of 27 South Thirteenth street; John Barnes, 19, of 27 South Twelfth street; John Fennigen, 14, and his brother, Walter, 12, of 53 South Eighteenth street; John Plants, 12, of 1304 Muriel street; John Pawelko, 14, of 404 Manor street; Michael Fedcho, 19, of 1219 Muriel street; Nick Terlesco, 13, and his brother, John, 15, of 53 South Thirteenth street; Sam Petrocco, 15, of 2608 Fifth avenue. Hill Charged With Mother's Murder

STREATOR, Ill., Aug. 27.—Harry Hill, pampered son of a wealthy physician, today stood formally charged by a coroner's jury with killing his eccentric mother with a revolver.

But in spite of frequent rumors of young Hill's whereabouts, he has not been definitely traced since he left the home of a friend in Chicago Tuesday noon, and presumably learned from newspapers that his mother's body had been found buried in the basement of her home here.

The coroner's jury concluded its investigation of the case late last night, finding Mrs. Hill died of a gunshot wound and recommending her son be apprehended and held to the grand jury for murder.

Testimony last night also gave a clue to where the weapon which killed Mrs. Hill was obtained. A .25-caliber automatic pistol belonging to a Streator garage, which Hill frequented, disappeared last winter, it was alleged, and later was found in Hill's machine. Three or four weeks ago the gun was lost again.

William Brydges, at whose home Hill stayed in Chicago the night his mother's body was unearthed, testified Hill had told him he had been disinherited by his mother because he planned to marry.

Hill's supposed fiance denied in an interview that she had planned to marry him in the near future, stating she refused his proposal because of his ill health.

RECEIVERS MAKE DOHENY OIL LEASE PAY

By Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—The Elk Hills oil lease receivership has been released by Federal Judge Paul J. McCormick and Naval Oil Reserves 1 and 2 were officially restored to the government.

Judge McCormick highly praised the work of Rear Admiral Harry H. Rousseau, retired, and J. Crampton Anderson, who for three years have been receivers for the Doheny interests in the legal tangle which resulted from the Elk Hills leases. Both receivers declined to accept fees for their services.

"The administration of this receivership," the court said, "has been an unusual example of efficiency, and it is remarkable that more than $12,000,000 have been turned over to the federal treasury while this operation has been carried on at an average cost of $446 a month."

According to the receivers' report, there was a gross income of $12,905,269.31 during the receivership extending from March, 1924. The report showed production of 4,631,982 barrels of crude oil, and 5,720,981,000 cubic feet of natural gas, and manufacture of 4,714,413 gallons of gasoline. There were royalty sales of 1,324,096 barrels of crude oil and 2,632,992,580 cubic feet of gas, and sale of 1,811,368 gallons of gasoline.

LORD CECIL MAY QUIT CABINET

By H. H. STANSBURY,

Universal Service Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable Dispatch.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—Lord Cecil has resigned from the British cabinet, according to an unconfirmed but well authenticated report in semi-official circles in London. It is understood that Lord Cecil is piqued over the attitude of his colleagues toward the League of Nations and the efforts of the disarmament conference. Lord Cecil protests that the foreign office is withdrawing every important question from league adjudication.

Lord Cecil is also reported to be aggrieved at the stand of his cabinet colleagues to the effect that further disarmament conferences are useless. It is not definitely known whether Cecil's decision to resign is final, but this will be revealed Tuesday when the cabinet convenes.

PRETTY SISTERS CHEAT JAIL TO END TOUR

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Florina Johnson, twenty, and her sister, Nita, eighteen, have left for their home in Little Rock, Ark., considerably wiser, but not a bit sadder than when they started out to tour the leading cities of the world, although they had been jailed here.

In fact, Probation Officer May Mangin accompanied them to the train, for the two charming girls had been turned out of the court of special sessions under suspended sentences on shoplifting charges but an hour before.

Florina, a school teacher and graduate of the State Teachers' College at Conway, Ark., and Nita, a student at the Texas Woman's College, Fort Worth, Tex., left their home June 28, to see as much of the world as limited means would permit. They hoped to get to London and Paris, but these hopes died when their slender savings gave out in New York, whither they had come in the automobile of a family friend.

They took an apartment and looked for work. They wore out their shoes and found no employment.

August 5, in a Fifth avenue store Florina took a book and a cigarette holder, and Nita helped herself to three books. They readily confessed taking things, and when arraigned in court two days later pleaded guilty. They were sent to the Florence Crittenton home while authorities checked up their story. Their parents telegraphed their fare back to Little Rock.

Save U. S. Consulate From French Mob

CHERBOURG, France, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers, two thousand strong, fought a pitched battle with police and soldiers from 8 o'clock last night until long past midnight in an effort to reach the American consulate. About fifteen of them attained the goal at midnight, but in charge of policemen who had arrested them, the consulate being transformed into a temporary police station. Realizing there was no chance of getting the better of the police and soldiers the others dispersed.

LIMIT "GRIEF PARADE"

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Determined to maintain their protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti to the end, the defense committee has decided to do without a band and limit the number of mourners so that the funeral cortege tomorrow can pass the State House and the common, where police have arrested nearly 200 persons engaged in previous demonstrations.

Granted a permit by the street commissioners to form an imposing line of march, when the bodies will be carried to Forest Hills for cremation, the committee was checked by the police, who declared the procession must take the direct route and avoid the State House, where further disturbances were feared.

It cost Frank Snyder, 28, of Walnut street, Heidelberg, $5 to keep a girl friend from going to the theater with another man. When Snyder went to the home of Anna Liska, 17, of Kennedy street, Carnegie, and learned that Miss Liska was going to the theater, he refused to leave and stated that if anyone took her to the theater he would do it. Her father called Frank Nuthrown, chief of Glendale police, who arrested Snyder. The $5 was assessed at a hearing before Justice of the Peace Frank Danerk, of Glendale.

FLAY M'GOVERN AT RALLIES

Controller C. C. McGovern was the target of Republican organization candidates who spoke last night at meetings in the Municipal Building, Homestead Park, and the Coraopolis Armory.

"Why does he wait until the eleventh hour to try to correct what he says is wrong?" asked Robert G. Woodside, McGovern's opponent in the primary contest. "It is not necessary for the controller to get the books of any other office to find out the county's financial standing. The controller must sign warrants for every cent that goes out of the treasury."

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, after pointing to the 78 bridges built by the commissioners, the 160 miles of roads reconstructed and resurfaced and other improvements, declared "many more projects would be completed had not former Controller Moore died, for no technical objections would have been raised to block them."

"If McGovern has countersigned warrants for expenditures or if his speeches and charges are in good faith, he has failed you," said County Treasurer Samuel D. Foster.

"I don't want to say anything about an opponent," said Commissioner E. V. Babcock. "The controller said the other day that he is barnstorming to get some figures, but he is brainstorming."

Colleen Moore's New Picture, "I'll Tell The World," Will Be Directed by Marshall Neilan

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.

MARSHALL NEILAN has been won over to the idea of directing Colleen Moore in "I'll Tell the World." I say won over, because Mickey had set his heart on making "Hell's Angels," and had everything set to direct it for Howard Hughes. But with the Colleen Moore picture all ready to be filmed—Mickey decided to postpone his "Hell's Angels" and sign with First National.

Mickey and Colleen are a good combination. She can play the sort of comedy drama that he directs so well—and if Mickey will settle right down and go to work he can make a picture that will have everyone applauding. He has done it before and he can do it now.

Furthermore, a director with Mickey's understanding of pathos won't do Colleen any harm. Some years ago he made pictures for First National that were among the big money makers. United Artists still holds a contract for Mr. Neilan and he will fulfill it at a later date. "Hell's Angels" is bound to be made—it is in Mickey's system.

John McCormick is temporarily back at First National. I mean he has offices there. No one seems to know just where Colleen will make her next picture—probably at the Metropolitan studios.

William Powell, George Bancroft and the other movie crooks had better watch their step. Conrad Nagel, the model young man of the movies, has been signed to play the lead in "The Girl from Chicago," a crook melodrama by Arthur Somers Roche. Conrad, who has heretofore refrained from cracking safes, robbing jewelry stores, et cetera, was selected for the part by Warner Brothers following his good work in "Slightly Used."

I say good work without feeling that I am being overly enthusiastic, for Roxie has signed "Slightly Used" for his new theater. Conrad will remain at Warners for two pictures. In addition to the crook story, he will again play opposite May McAvoy—this time in "If I Were Single."

"The Girl From Chicago" not only marks an innovation for Conrad by giving him his first taste of being a wicked young man, but it is Myrna Loy's first chance as a leading lady.

There is a little rumor circulating around that Norman Kerry will play opposite Greta Garbo in "The Divine Woman." This is an adaptation from "Starlight" and is no relation to "The Divine Lady," E. Barrington's story of Lady Hamilton's adventures. I suppose most people would enjoy seeing Jack Gilbert as Greta's leading man, but, alas, "The Cossack" calls him. Rumor has it that Norman is due to sign any day now. This is his third or fourth for M-G-M. He is almost as much at home on the lot there now as he is at Universal.

WELCOME PREPARED FOR STOCK FAVORITE

Pittsburgh theatergoers are preparing to welcome Thurston Hall, one-time leading man with the Harry Davis Players. He will head the George Sharp Production Stock Company in "Laff That Off" in the Pitt next week.

Mr. Hall is one of the most popular actors who ever played here. He was "a matinee idol" in the Harry Davis Players in the old Duquesne and the Grand Opera House and he has many friends here. When he arrived in town, the first thing he did was to drop into the Pittsburgh Press Club, of which he is a member. He found many of his old colleagues on hand to greet him.

Since playing in Pittsburgh Mr. Hall has traveled abroad much, appearing in Australia and other countries.

PANTOMIME COMIC IS CIRCUS GRADUATE

With training in circus funmaking, "Bozo" Snyder has accomplished results with comic pantomiming which gives him a unique place on the stage. This silent comedian has compiled a new show to open the Gayety Monday.

Mary Pickford Finally Signs Foreign Actor—But He's a Dog

Although Mary Pickford has heretofore kept away from the so-called "foreign invasion" of Hollywood, she has at last signed a German actor for an important role in "My Best Girl," her new vehicle.

Tell von Elsterstrand is the gentleman in question. He is only 6 years old, but he weights 162 pounds and is liable to be quite a lad when he grows up. Following the latest Hollywood fad, he wears a remarkable black and white fur coat which is the envy of everyone on the set, and in spite of his artistocratic German lineage, for his parents were great friends of the ex-Kaiser, he is very democratic and companionable.

The fact that Herr von Elsterstrand is a Harlequin Great Dane may have something to do with this, for Great Danes are noted for their friendliness. His owner, the Countess Viva Vuilleumier, values him at $5,000, for he was born in the ex-Kaiser's kennels in Berlin, and has won blue ribbons in every show where he has been entered. And he is one of the chief attractions in Miss Pickford's new United Artists picture.

ELEVATED RAILROADS PLANNED FOR CHICAGO

BROADWAY COMEDIAN IN VAN BIBBER SERIES

TWO REX BEACH YARNS BOUGHT FOR FILM USE

Rex Beach just cannot stay away from the movies—the film companies won't let him. Universal is the latest to persuade him to part with some of his fiction. They have purchased "The Michigan Kid" and "The Mating Call."

Scarcity of Heroines Halts Production Of Four Films

The scarcity of leading ladies is no longer a joke at Paramount Famous Players. Four pictures are held up, waiting for the right girl. There is the Fields-Conklin comedy, Richard Dix's next opera, Adolphe Menjou's film and George Bancroft's "Victory," and nary a leading lady for any of them. The female of the species is feeling better about the scarcity, for they had an idea when DeMille started lamenting that they couldn't get a leading man for "The Blue Danube," that perhaps there were too many women.

What a Strange Trait of Wanting "All or None"

With a great many, each "five" or "ten" seems so small in comparison with what they would LIKE to have that they promptly spend it with a careless "What's the use"?

And this is the VITAL MISTAKE.

What happens to those "fives" and "tens" in the long run will determine whether the future is to be comfortable or uncomfortable.

The thrill of a growing Savings Account is a sure cure for that careless feeling.

Only Three Days Remain in The August Sales

THREE more days....and the special prices effective in Furs, Furniture and Bedding during this month will be opportunities of the past. These are inducements for making selections in advance of regular season — inducements which pay substantial dividends in savings.

Bedding . . .

THE cold weather during the past week or two has served to remind one of the cold winter nights, when warm blankets and comforts are a necessity. The August Sale anticipates these needs with a wide variety of Bedding at very low prices.

Beacon Blankets, $5.00 each

Firmly woven by a special process that makes these blankets soft and warm, they come in rose, blue, gold, lavender or green, neatly bound; size 66x82 inches. They may be used as a bed blanket or a throw. A heavier blanket, same colors, 72x84 inches, $9.00 each.

Beacon Indian Blankets in gay colors, are fine for a college boy or girl; size 60x80 inches, $3.75 each; 66x80 inches, $4.50 each.

Wool Blankets, $6.50 pair

The most popular Blanket in the August Sale, of which hundreds have been sold. Firmly woven entirely of wool, they come in pretty plaids of lavender, yellow, blue, gray, rose, tan, green or black, with white; and in red-and-black; sateen bound; 4 to 4¼ pounds; size 68x80 inches.

Heavy Wool Plaid Blankets, in rose, blue, yellow, lavender, gray, peach, tan with white, and red-and-black; sateen bound; 5 to 5¼ pounds; size 72x82 inches, $9.75 pair.

Wool and Cotton Plaid Blankets, in pink, blue, gray, tan, yellow or lavender; 68x80 inches, $3.75 pair.

"Hidden Value"

(A dissertation on the subject, inspired by the August Sale).

Two coats may look exactly alike, and yet be so different. They may even be of the same quality of fur, yet one will far outwear the other. What is the answer? Workmanship.

Many skins must be joined together to produce one fur coat. If the work is done with knowledge, skill and care, the coat lasts; if not, cost is continually being added to the original price, by repairs.

Since the value in a fur coat is such a cryptic thing, concealed from all but the most practiced eye, it should be purchased in a store whose integrity is undisputed, where absolute confidence is assured.

SEPTEMBER RESOLUTIONS.

Go to. A Foolish Woman saveth all her good resolves for New Year's Day.

But a Wise Wife "taketh stock" of herself at the end of the Silly Season; and, even while she lifteth her Beloved's clothes from out of the mothballs, doth she bring forth her annual RESOLUTIONS, and set them in order.

Then, be it resolved herewith, that I shall dwell in peace and harmony through all the coming year, with this Human Being, whom I love, even though he may not be the Stained-Glass Saint which I believed I was marrying.

That I shall close mine eyes to his short-comings, mine ears to his criticisms, and my mouth at ALL vital moments.

That I shall look for the cinder and not for the moat in my Beloved's eye, nor seek to comfort him with cautionings and admonitions and "I-told-you-sos," in his moments of anguish or remorse.

That I shall accept his old alibis with a sweet grace, and BELIEVE them in the face of all blocks, damaging evidence and even the assurance of mine own eyes. For it is a poor wife, indeed, that hath not more faith in her husband's word than in the dining-room clock!

That I shall not deceive mine husband more than is absolutely necessary for his own peace of mind, and that all my lies shall be little ones.

That I shall not purloin the things which fall from his pockets, nor cherish the words which fall from his mouth when he sleepeth; but shall return unto him his small change, his own pencils, his handkerchiefs, his letters and his secrets.

That I shall not deny him the joy of "surprising" me with "unexpected" gifts nor his naive delight in gladdening my heart with those things which I do NOT want, even though I have been hinting my desires for something ELSE, for an whole season.

That I shall look carefully for cob-webs, dust, sleeve-links, pin-holes and extenuating circumstances in mine husband's home, his garments and his conduct, and pray that my patience and credulity be as elastic as a rubber band, which encompasseth but doth not bind.

That I shall refrain from offering by Beloved ADVICE! For this is the last "insult" of a woman to a He-male. He cannot swallow it!

That I shall not look for sympathy, flattery, or suspicious conduct from my Beloved; but shall take it for granted that he is sorry or pleased or thrilled, knowing that when an husband is SILENT, he is SATISFIED!

Thus, my Daughter, doth a wise wife gird up her spirit and return unto her JOB filled with Good Resolutions, after the Summer vacation from Matrimony.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

U.S. Senator From New York

FLIGHT THROUGH LIFE A MOTOR PROBLEM.

BEFORE the brave men who crossed the ocean in their airplanes could perform such wonderful feats, there had to be invented powerful and dependable engines. Without an unfailing machine there could be no successful flight.

DR. COPELAND

Upon the pump or machine known as the human heart depends the fate of every man and woman in the world. Unless this machine is unfailing in its functions, the journey of life may be ended at any moment.

There is no greater evidence of the wonders of creation than the undisturbed action of this organ. That it does not wear out years before it stops beating should be the marvel of each owner of a heart.

As a matter of fact, many persons do have more or less functional disturbance with the heart. So far as duration of life is concerned, such disabilities are comparatively unimportant. But when they are so pronounced as to be noticed by the victim, they are mentally disturbing, to say the least.

The ideal situation in life is to go through the whole journey without being conscious of the heart. Palpitation is a disquieting symptom. It suggests something dreadful.

By "palpitation" we mean increased and forcible beating of the heart. It appears to "flutter" or to "pound" or to "thump."

"Skipping a beat" is another and similar affliction. No matter what form the disturbance takes, it is annoying.

We regard these heart symptoms as signs of nervousness. I don't want to say they are signs of hysteria, but they are certainly of nervous origin.

Worry, grief, overwork, indigestion, over-smoking, too much coffee or alcohol, sexual excesses, anemia and, in women, uterine disturbance may have palpitation as a symptom. Any sort of over-indulgence may produce it.

This distressing symptom should be a warning that the manner of living is wrong. It should cause its victim to reform. By correction of the habits the heart will quiet down and resume its normal activities.

Nature is most kindly. It is rare, indeed, for her to pounce on an unwarned person and to wipe out life. Little hints are given at first. Later, more pronounced signs of her displeasure are apparent to the wise person. By heeding these early indications of trouble ahead, serious disability will be avoided.

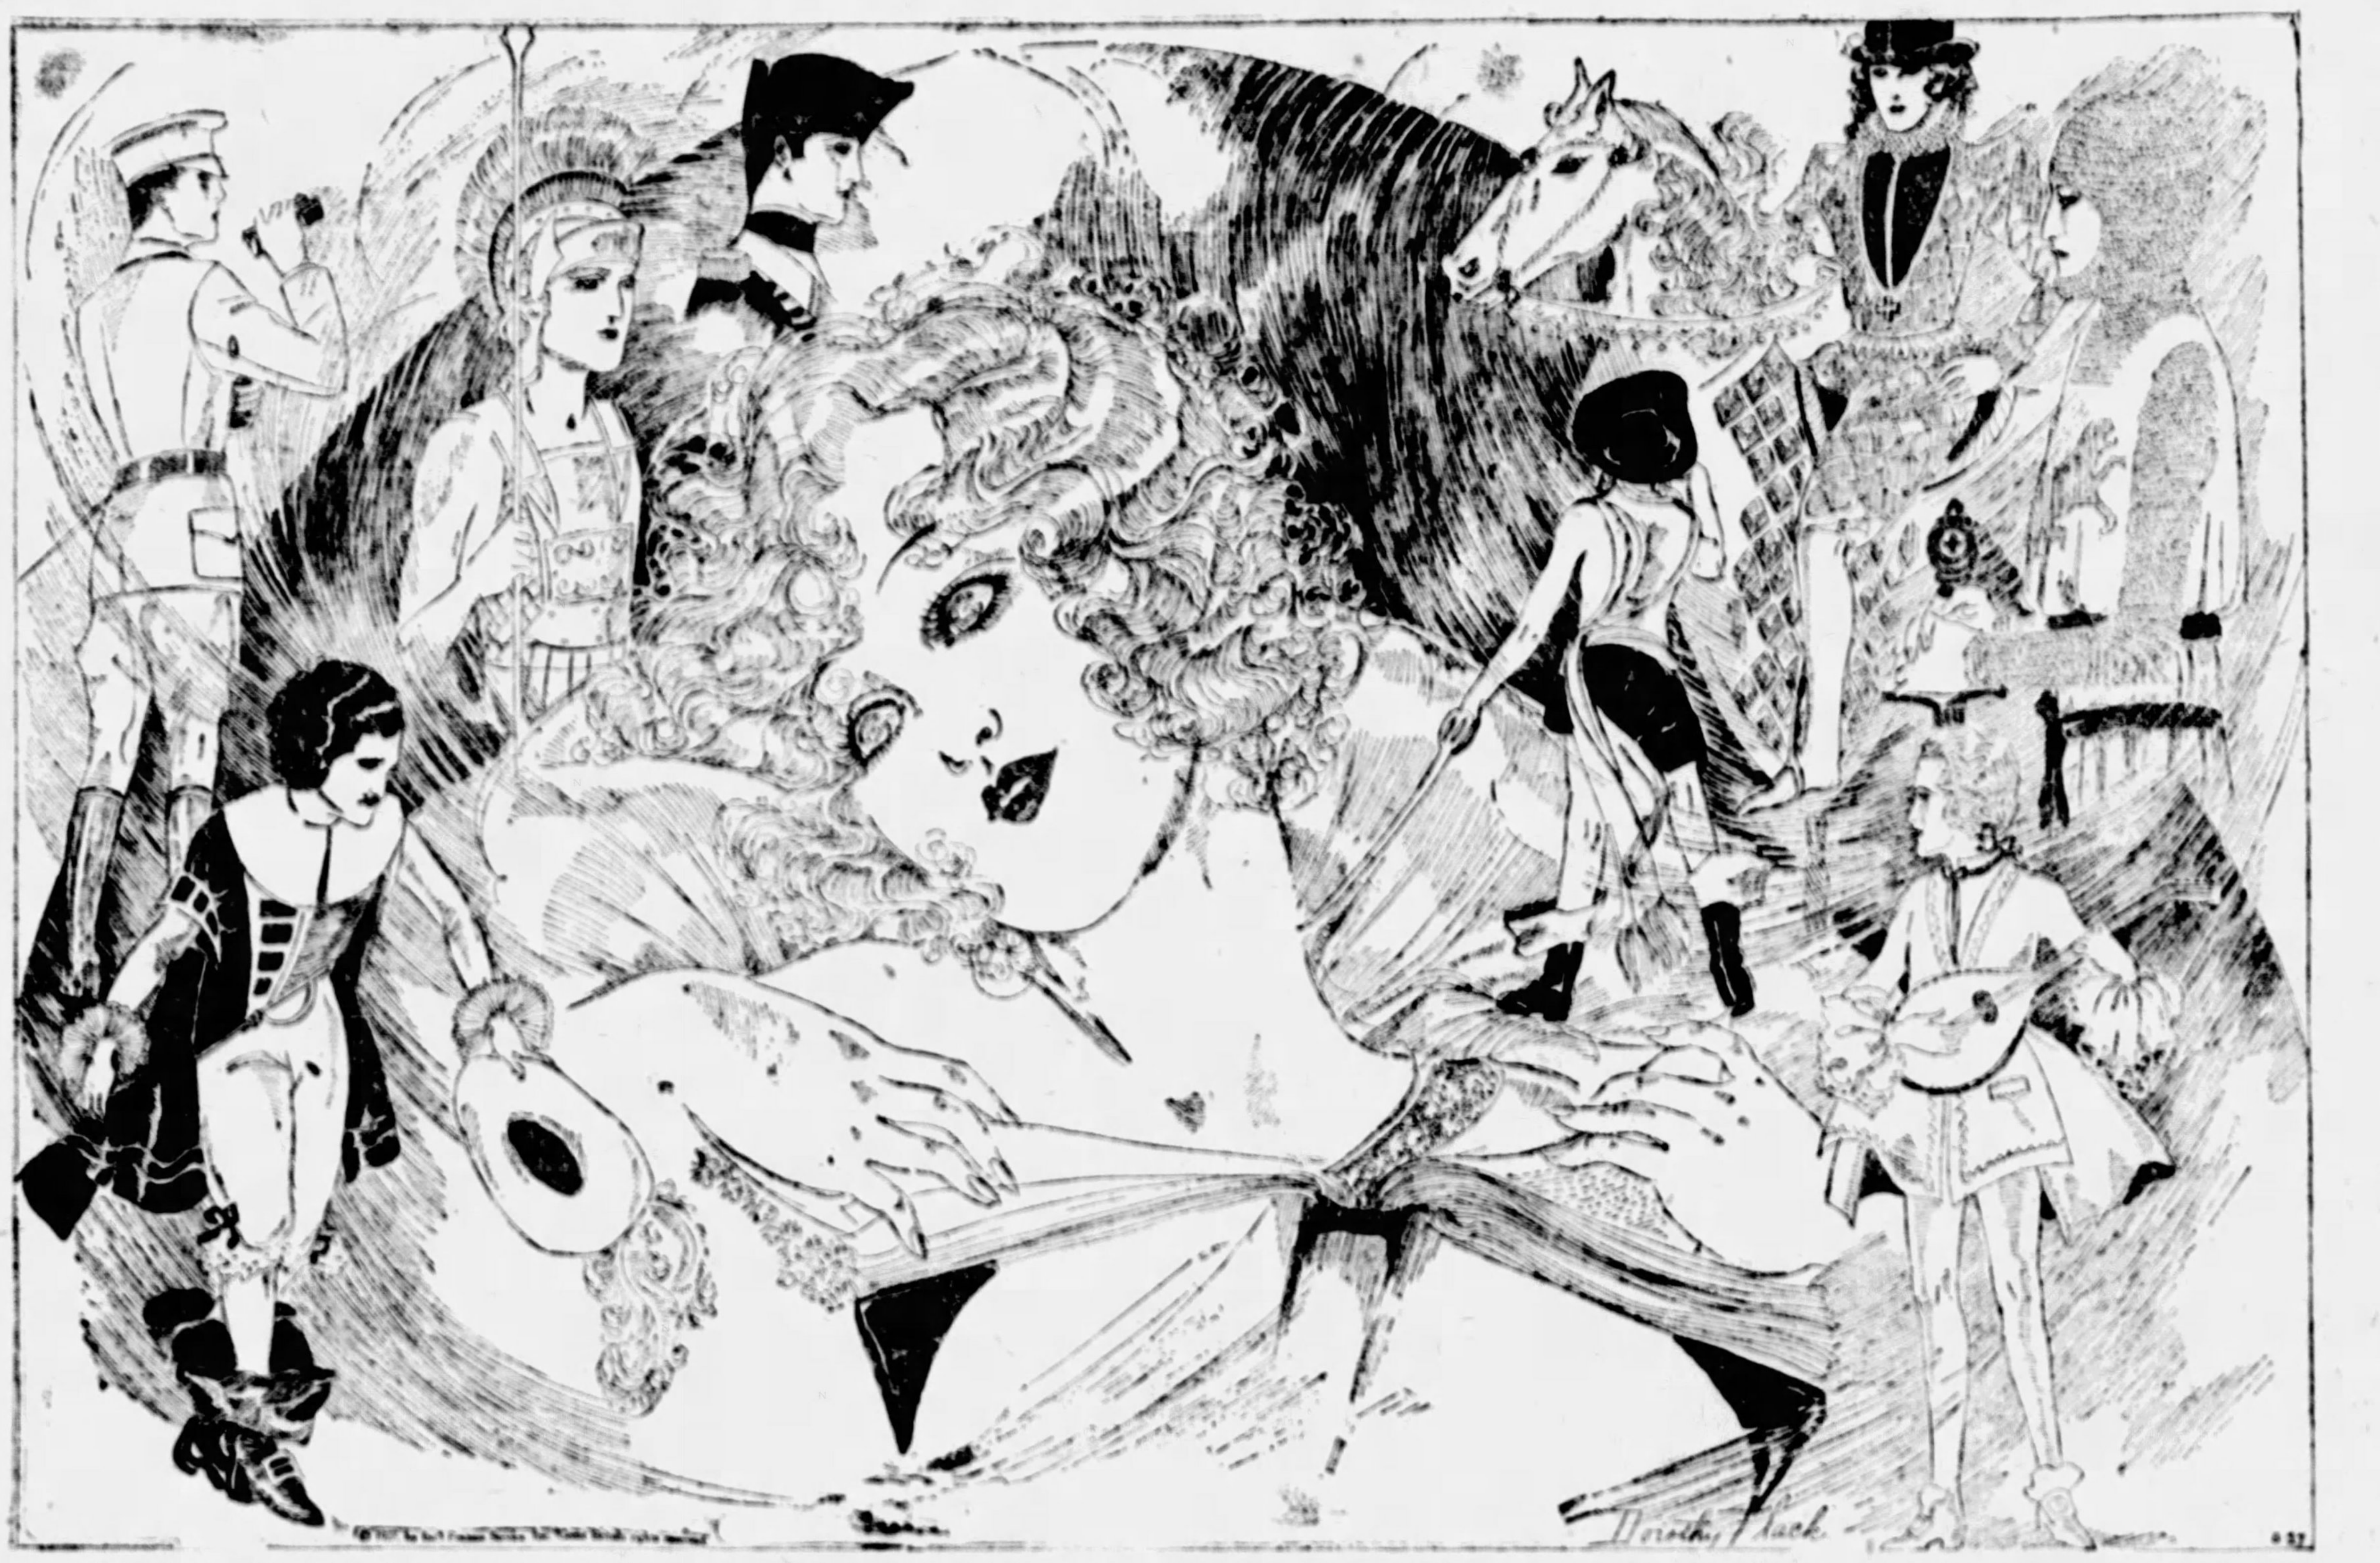
Ritzy Rosey is trying her very best to be old-fashioned today. In a London fashion magazine she read that the newest coiffure consisted of short little curls covering one's entire head. And with that piquant mode the summer girl wore a huge hat and long, full skirts. In such a costume one is likely to find oneself in the garden gathering roses!

A World All Her Own

She Can Summon Her Companions at Will

Drawn by Dorothy Flack



ALONE with her thoughts! But, no, she's never alone, for the world of her mind is peopled with the heroes of her heart. From between the pages of her books come prancing the heroes whom her mood demands. Perhaps it's a brave Knight of the Round Table, whose heroic deeds inspire her to reverent awe. Again, he will be the gay Troubadour and she the dainty powdered lady to whom he pours out his love to the accompaniment of his singing lute. Or, when she's particularly daring and reckless, she's the pirate's bride, sailing the main and sharing his dangers and glorifying in his prowess.

Again, she wanders through the splendors of ancient Greece, and sees the mighty lords fighting for her favors, as she lazily watches and encourages them, surrounded by her lovely slaves.

Then she skips the centuries and finds herself the brave sweetheart, watching and cheering her lover as he marches to fight for the freedom of her country.

And then the thrill of her khaki-clad hero, leading his men to victory from the muddy depths of the sodden trench.

Oh, she's never alone! In an endless procession her heroes march before her and in each and every one she sees the glory and beauty of the love that will be hers when she meets her real-for-sure Hero.

Dorothy Dix Says:

NO WONDER THEY CALL MARRIAGE A GAMBLE.

THE most important act of a man's and woman's life is getting married. It makes or mars them. It involves their happiness, their health, their prosperity, yet they give to it less intelligent thought and less careful consideration than to anything else that they ever do.

No man or woman, for instance, would pay as much as $500 for a dog or a horse without looking up its pedigree and seeing what sort of a family history it had. Nor would he or she buy an animal that cost that much without having a competent veterinary look it over carefully and see that it was free from disease and sound in wind and limb.

Yet a young man will go blithely forth anw marry a girl because she has a peaches-and-cream complexion and a nice permanent wave in her hair, without ever making an effort to find out whether she is strong and healthy and has a heritage of good, clean blood, or whether she has some latent disease that will leave her an invalid on his hands in a few years, or if she has some taint in her life stream that will bring down a curse upon his children.

Worse still, a girl will marry a fascinating man even if she knows he is a roue, and trust to luck that she will not have to spend the balance of her days in helping him to harvest his wild oats crop, and that some miracle will prevent the sins of the father from being visited upon the children. But she would not take that long a shot on any other venture on earth.

No man or woman would buy a piece of property without investigating its title and finding out if it were clear of incumbrance. Yet men and women marry strangers without ever taking the trouble to look up the records of those whom they are taking for life companions.

Every day we read in the papers about worthy people who find that they have unwittingly married bigamists, or criminals, or adventurers. All of us know broken-hearted men and women whose lives have been blasted and whose homes have been wrecked by the discovery of some dark episode in the past of their wives or husbands.

And these tragedies might all have been averted if the men and women had taken a tithe of the pains to investigate the histories of those they were marrying that they would have done to see that there was no mortgage on the house and lot they were purchasing.

No man or woman would go into a 10-year partnership with another man or woman without thoroughly investigating the sort of proposition they were offered. They would want to know just how it was financed and what were its chances of success. Above all, they would want to know everything possible about the individuals with whom they were going to link their fortunes; whether he or she was honest, competent, industrious, thrifty, liberal, or lazy, shiftless, extravagant and unreliable.

But men and women go into a life partnership in which they invest their all of money, of hope, of happiness, into which they put the work of their hands and the ambitions and desires of their souls, without even considering whether the new firm has a chance of pulling through, or finding out a single thing about those with whom they have signed the contract until death do us part.

Young people marry without enough money to support a home, and their marriage goes bankrupt, as every enterprise does that is not adequately financed.

A man marries a girl because she is good-looking and dresses beautifully and dances the Charleston, and finds that he has as a partner a wife who will not do her part, who loafs on her end of the job, who spends money faster than he can make it, and she breaks the firm.

A girl marries a man because he has dark eyes and a soulful way of looking at her and is a glib talker, and she finds that he is a shirker, that he is dishonest and unfaithful and not to be trusted.

But this knowledge comes too late to avert the unhappiness of those who have gotten the wrong matrimonial partners. The time to have sized them up and studied their qualifications and fitness for the positions they were expected to hold was before the contract was signed.

Nor would any man or woman go into a business partnership without having his or her part of the labor specifically understood, and it definitely settled what percentage of the profits he or she was to receive.

Yet men and women enter into marriage partnership on a vague understanding that each is to be perfectly lovely and do everything possible for the good of the other. The result of this lovers' agreement is that the selfish and the greedy grab all of the perquisites and leave the conscientious with the bag to hold.

Many a man has to get up and cook his own breakfast and wash the baby and get the children off to school before he goes to work, while his indolent wife lies in bed; and many a tightwad husband never gives his wife a nickel that she can call her own for her 10 hours of domestic slavery a day.

No woman will buy a new dress without investigating its wearing quality and its style and its suitability for the purpose for which she wants it, and its becomingness, and whether it ravishes her fancy or not. Nor would she buy one until she had shopped around and given every other frock in her vicinity the once-over.

But she will marry a man at sight, without ever taking into consideration his disposition, or his congeniality, or whether she wants somebody to make love to her or make money for her. And, alas, husbands do not come with tags that entitle you to return them to the bargain counter if you don't like them when you get them home, or have decided that you don't really want one after all.

No wonder they call marriage a gamble. Men and women take chances in it that would make the greatest plunger on a race track turn pale at the risks!

Quicksands of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

A New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

FOR a minute that seemed an eternity I clung to the door between Dicky's room and mine, trying to rally my strength to the point of getting back to my bed without waking him. I could not doubt that the oaths I just had heard my husband utter in his troubled dream applied to me, while his frenzied cry of "Oh, Ede, it can't be true," I could interpret but in one way.

My suspicions of the afternoon were true. Edith Fairfax was responsible for Dicky's incomprehensible behavior to me. She was trying to poison his mind against me, and—something infinitely more galling, he was permitting himself to believe whatever she was telling him.

That it was something unusually ingenious, especially diabolical, I was sure from its effect upon Dicky. He has a quick temper, and can work himself to rage that is alarming, but there was something about his present cold, deadly wrath which was utterly strange to my knowledge of him.

From the long-ago experience of his troubled dreams, I knew that presently he would awaken with a start, and, gathering strength from some untapped reservoir, I closed the door softly again and crept back to my bed.

I did not lose myself in sleep for a single minute during the entire night, though I tried every expedient to induce slumber of which I ever had heard. Thus it was that I heard Dicky moving about his room an hour before his usual time for arising, and later heard him say something which I could not distinguish to Katie, who, I knew from looking at my wrist watch, must have come downstairs to prepare breakfast.

Then the outside door slammed, and tense with excitement, I scrambled out of bed, took my cold shower and dressed, making as quick time as I could, but omitting no detail of my usual morning routine. I did not wish Katie to think that I was excited over anything, and I am sure that Dicky had "saved his face," in Chinese parlance. I knew also that if I were adroit, I could get from her the reason he had given her for his early departure without her suspecting my anxiety to know it.

My little maid stared frankly at me as I came into the kitchenette.

"Vot matter mit you?" she exclaimed, forgetting the "Good-morning," which it is her invariable custom to give me. "You seeck? You look like somebody dragged you troo vun keyhole."

"I have one of my headaches," I replied, and spoke only the truth, for my excitement and sleepless vigil had brought on my troublesome old affliction. "I wanted to tell you not to give me coffee for breakfast. Will you please make me a cup of tea? That is all I want."

"Oh! I so sorry," Katie said sympathetically. "Sure ting, I feex tea right away. Ef any more coom down seeck or goin' away, I no have to get breakfast. Meester Graham he coom shoost as I get into keetchen, say he have to get downtown extra early to see man going away on train und dot he no have time to vait for breakfast. He may make hees excuses to you ven you get oop, say he forgot to tell you last night."

"Thank you, Katie," I returned, thankful that my little maid was not putting two and two together and getting the sum of five, her usual process when there is any deviation from our household routine. "I think I'll lie down again until you get the tea ready. My head is pretty bad."

But it was my heart which was heavy as I went back into my bedroom and changing my dress from a lounging robe, lay down again. For a few minutes I felt as if I had not the strength to sit up. Dicky's reason for leaving so early which he had given Katie was only a subterfuge, I was sure. He could not bear to sit opposite me at the breakfast table, that was the real reason.

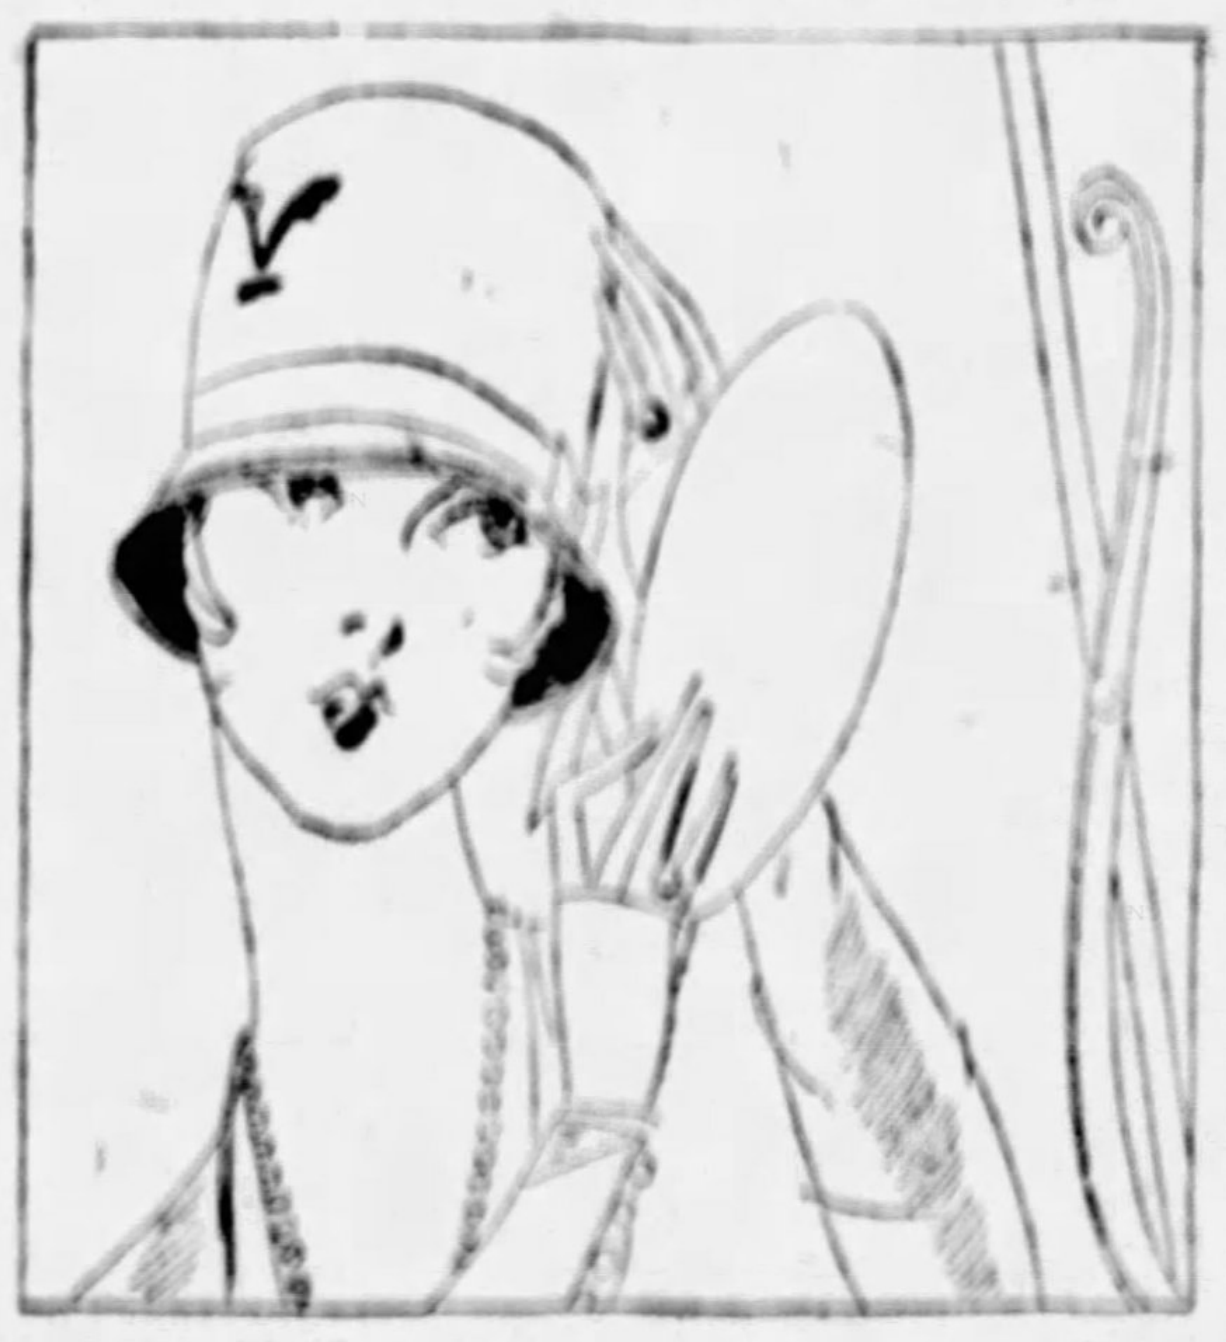
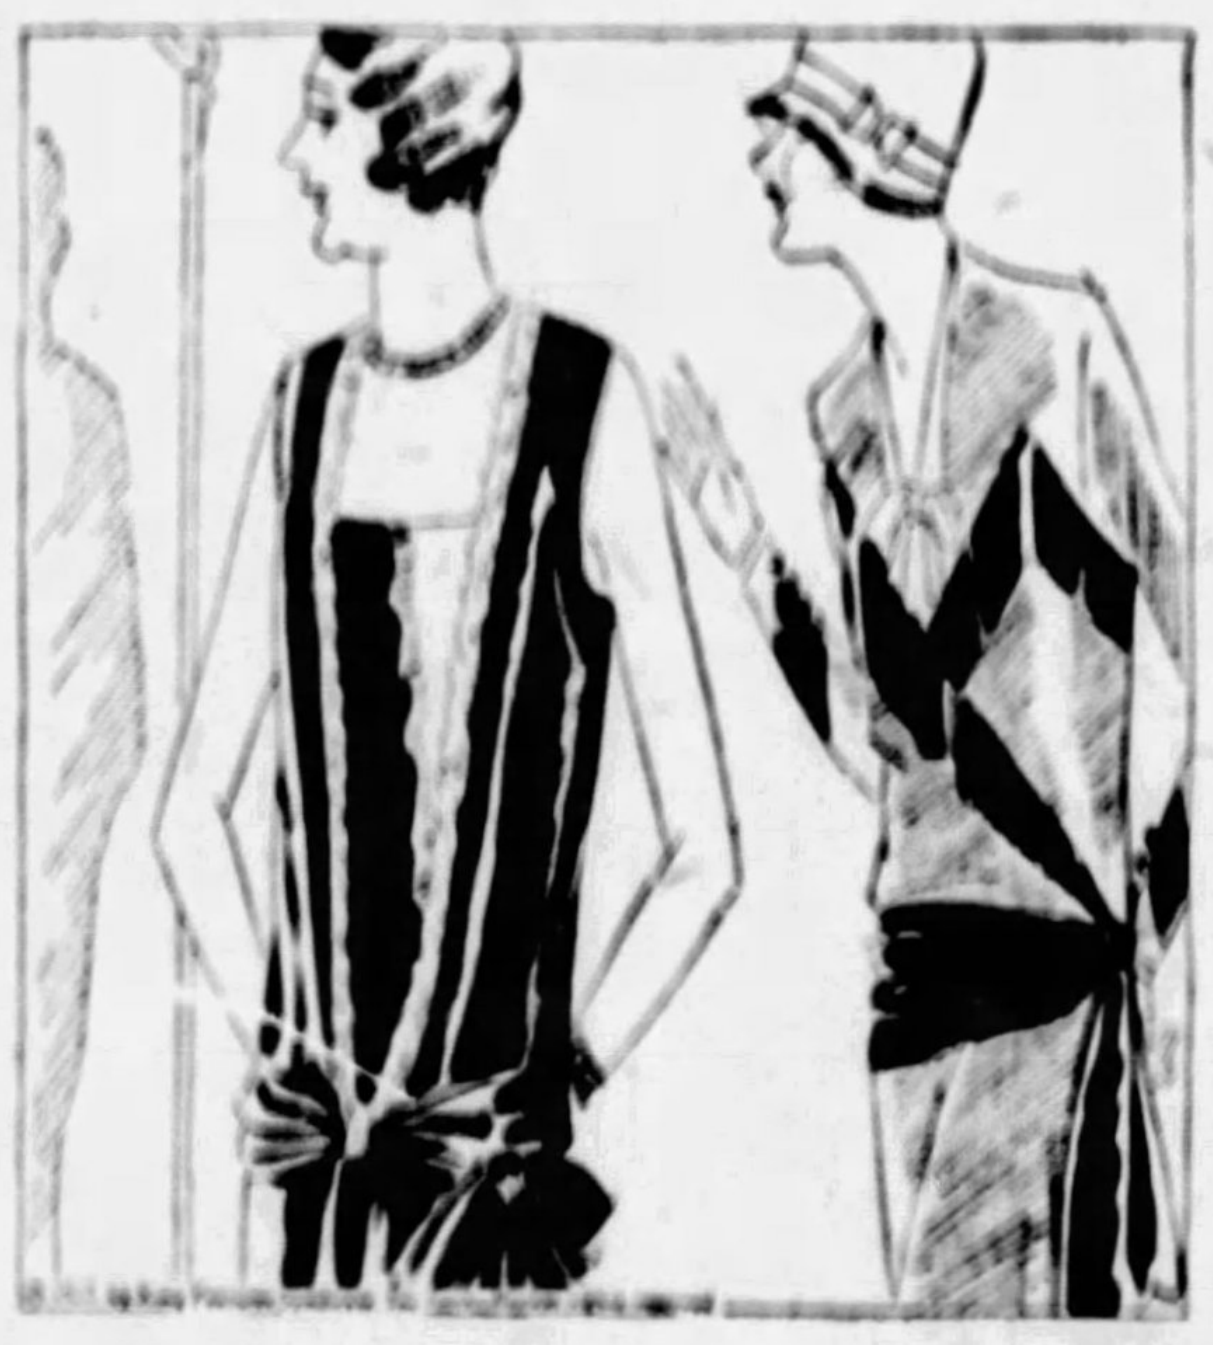
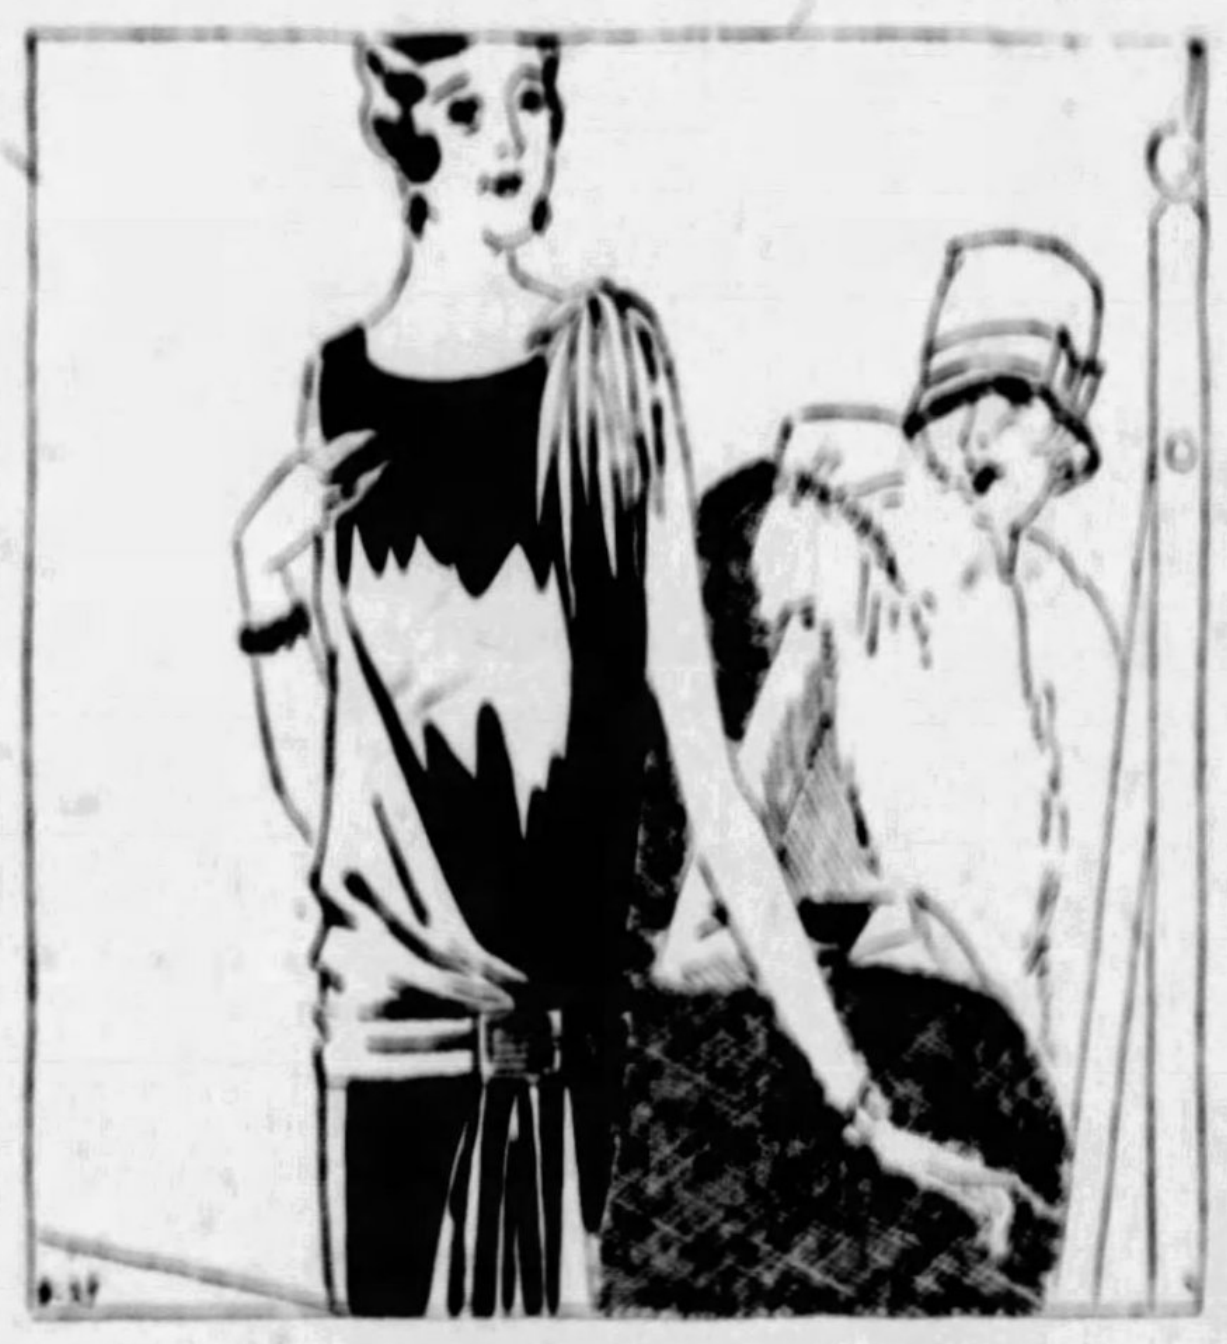
CHIC CHERIE ⁂ Aunt Em Needs Encouragement. ⁂ LATEST FASHIONS



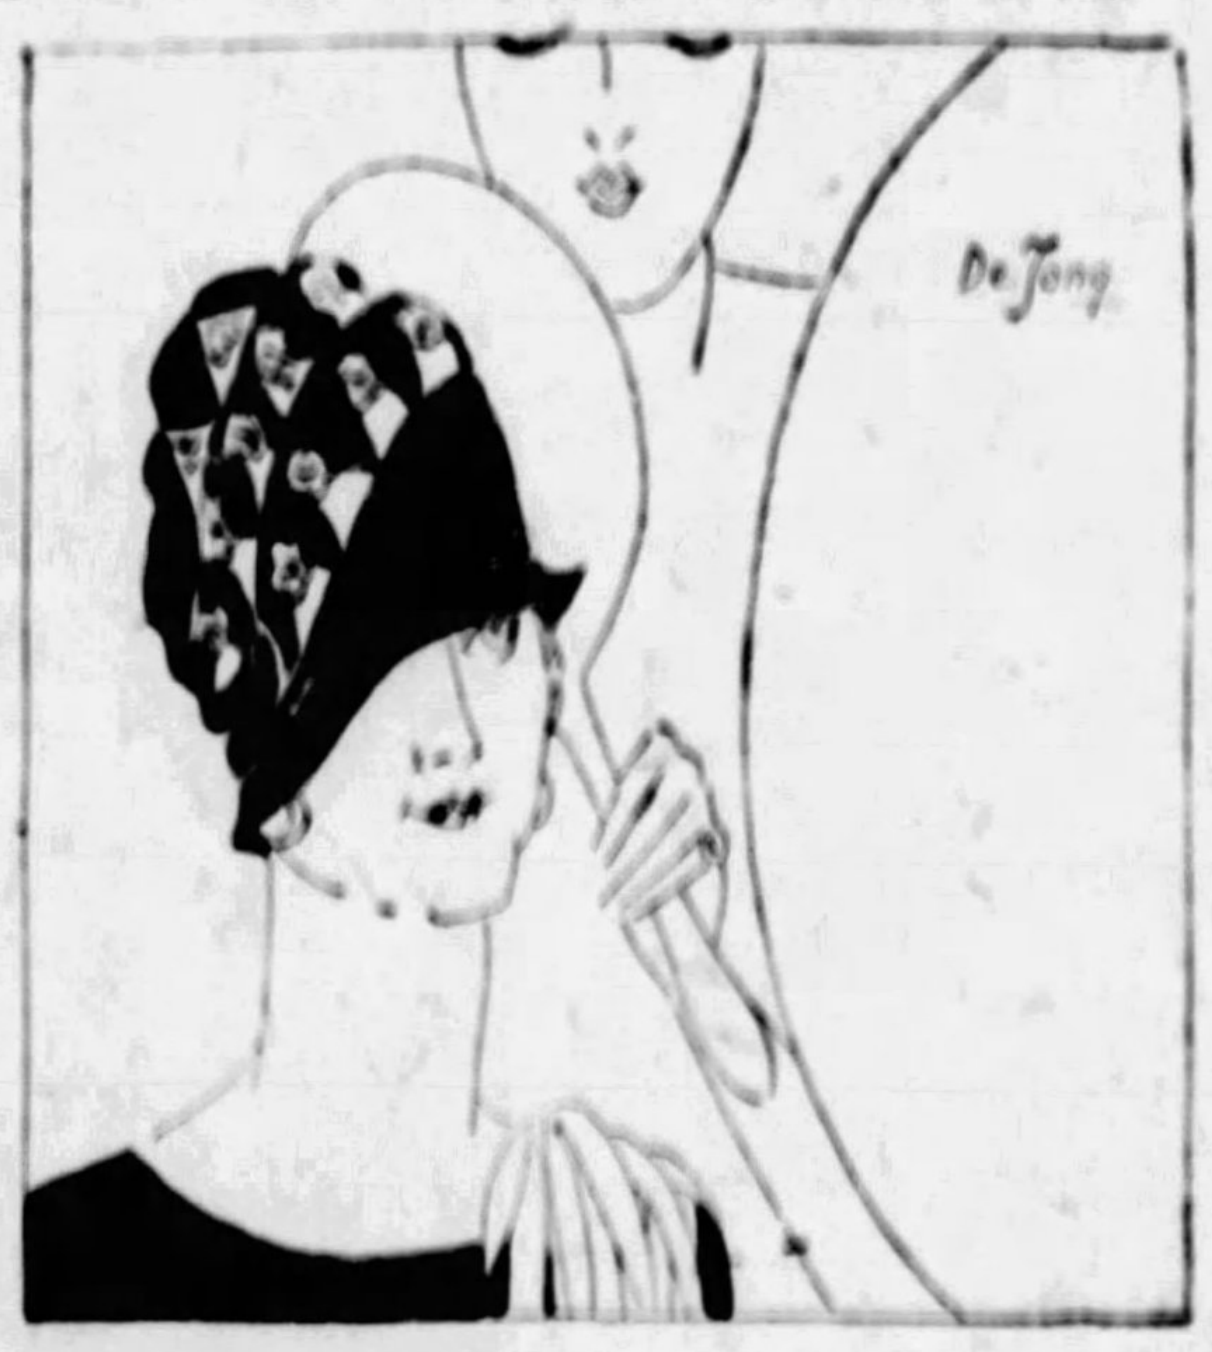
The proper place for a wishbone, this season, is on a hat. This is only one of the things that occupies Cherie's mind. The more important matter is Aunt Em. Aunt Em is enjoying her money, but she really has to be encouraged to extravagance. That's Cherie's job and she takes it very seriously, of course.



It's the sort of dress Aunt Em should wear. Satin and sleeveless with the long lines that make her look slender and a one-sided skirt drape topped by a bow. She'll have to buy it or Cherie won't feel comfortable in the silk crepe trimmed with modernistic bands of satin that she's just bought for herself.



This second dinner dress has the most artfully simple draping of belt and bodice to a point fashionably over one hip, where it is held with the skirt drape by a large ornamental buckle. The shoulder flower is properly ragged. Aunt Em is only waiting to be urged to buy them both—and so she will be!



A most sophisticated hat. High crowned, of black felt, trimmed with folds of black velvet spotted with little velvet roses. Cherie is determined to do her duty by Aunt Em and there's only one way, Cherie thinks, for a woman to enjoy a fortune. That's to spend it, and Cherie is working hard on this each day.

Keeping that Schoolgirl Complexion

By VILMA BANKY

© 1927 Fanchon Beauty Features

Beware of any but a true complexion soap—used this way

KEEPING the skin clean, the pores open, is only half the secret of a good complexion. The most important advice is to use ONLY a true complexion soap ever on the face.

A soap may be excellent for a thousand purposes, yet be too harsh for the skin. Good complexions are often thus imperiled.

Hence, largely on expert advice, thousands use Palmolive Soap. A soap made solely for ONE purpose—to safeguard good complexions. A beauty soap you know is safe to use.

Wash your face gently with Palmolive. Massage its balmy lather of olive and palm oils into the skin. Rinse off with warm water, then with cold. If your skin is inclined to be naturally dry, apply a little good cold cream. Do this regularly and particularly in the evening.

That rule is credited with more beautiful skins than any other known. Use powder, rouge, make-up all you wish. But never let them remain over night. Follow one week, then note the difference in your skin.

Get Palmolive today. But be sure it is GENUINE Palmolive. Costs but 10c a cake.

Soaps represented as of palm and olive oils without the Palmolive name are usually crude imitations. So take care. The Palmolive-Peet Co., Chicago, U. S. A.

Week-End Dealings Quiet Here

There were no price changes of importance at the short session of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today. Week-end dullness ruled in the market and only scattered sales of the various fuel issues were reported. Most business was in the miscellaneous manufacturing stocks, but practically all of the trading was of the odd lot variety. The rise in Pittsburgh Screw & Bolt in Friday's trading brought a little demand for that issue this morning and first prices for the stock were at moderate advances over the previous close. The stock is considered as offering a rather meager return on investment at present quotations, but in view of the rumored pending increase in the dividend rate buyers are thought to be taking the issue now on the assumption that payments will be raised to a $3 annual basis, which would mean a full 6 per cent on the present selling price.

Lone Star Gas did not appear in the early market. A few trades of Arkansas were chalked up at figures showing no change from Friday's prices. Standard Sanitary was at 92¼, practically unchanged, and one sale of Window Glass Machine was made at 35, also unchanged.

In the later trading offers of Screw and Bolt around the opening level were withdrawn and quotations moved up moderately, the rise, however, being sufficient to carry the price to a new high record since the shares were listed. Lone Star continued with sales at 48 representing a small fractional advance over yesterday's final.

Ford Accessory Contracts.

It is reported that American Bosch Magneto Corporation and Electric Auto-Lite Company are furnishing the starting-lighting system for the new Ford car. The business is to be equally divided between the two companies. Both concerns are setting up equipment as rapidly as possible for the new contract. The present schedule calls for 1,000 sets a day from each company beginning October 1, but it is considered doubtful if the Ford company is able to accept such volume before early November.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened firm today at an advance of 24 to 48 points, establishing new high record prices for all positions.

Buying on the bullish view of the crop outlook was stimulated by sharp advances in Liverpool, complaints of cold rains in the Eastern belt and continuation of very bullish private reports on Texas crop prospects.

December contracts sold up to 22.87c and March to 22.98c, active months showing net gains of 34 to 45 points before the initial demand had been supplied. Realizing caused reactions of 6 or 7 points from these figures, but buying orders continued to come in. The market was holding around 22.80 for December at the end of the first hour.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Week-end profit-taking, particularly in convertible liens, marked the dull bond market today. Recessions were of a small fractional nature and confined to a handful of issues well scattered over the list. A few railway and industrial mortgages scored small gains over yesterday's closing figures, including Western Maryland 4s, Shelly Oil 5s, U. S. Steel 5s and U. S. Rubber 5s.

Realizing sales were heaviest in recently strong issues, such as Erie "D" 4s and International Paper 5s, Missouri Pacific 4s and Dodge Brothers 6s also eased.

The recent tendency to limit commitments in the foreign division was again in evidence. Trading here was in small volume, and price changes were of little moment. One or two French securities showed recuperative powers but most of the group held steady.

United States government obligations were quiet.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, (00 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

INDUSTRIALS LEAD MARKET ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(A. P.)—Stock prices displayed a firm undertone at the opening of today's market. The first sale of United States Steel common was at 141½, up ⅝ and a new high record. Kelly-Springfield advanced a point, and large blocks of some of the minor motors changed hands at fractionally higher prices in the early trading.

The market gathered strength as the session progressed with buying again centering in the shares of pivotal industrials. Week-end profit-taking was well absorbed, and pools were again active in marking up a number of their favorites. Activity and strength of Kelly-Springfield was associated with reports of the company's expansion plans, particularly in foreign fields. Kelly-Springfield 6 per cent preferred quickly ran up 4 points to 76, duplicating the year's high record. General Motors (old stock) touched 250, with nearly 2,000 shares changing hands in several transactions at that price. The new stock was run up to 126⅞. United States Steel common climbed to 142. Wright Aeronautical sold off 2 points on realizing, and further heaviness developed in some of the oil shares, particularly the Pan-American issues. In the foreign exchange markets demand sterling and French francs ruled practically unchanged around $4.85 13-16 and 3.91¾ cents, respectively, but some of the other European rates were slightly easier.

ONLY TWELVE ANSWER

CIVIL WAR REUNION

Only 12 answered the roll call at the Seventy-eighth Pennsylvaina Volunteers' reunion at Freeport, their ages totaling more than 1,000 years. One of the Civil War battles was "fought" again when Maj. A. B. Hay (left), Pittsburgh, re-elected president, and J. W. Stauffer, Jeannette, re-elected secretary-treasurer, met. Among the veterans were former County Commissioner I. K. Campbell and Samuel R. Evans, who has charge of Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall.

Title Won't Sidetrack Beauty's Apron

There are certain routines in almost every person's life that are followed, regardless of what may happen. They are little duties you get so used to doing that there is certain to be some kind of a lost feeling if missed for a day or two. Maybe this is more true with girls. But I know it has been proved so for me, at least.

When eight hours made up my day as a stenographer, I would always hurry home to prepare the evening meal. Mother would start, and by the time I reached home, everything would be ready for me to complete the meal. This really became a part of my life and I just slipped on my apron as a matter of course and started in to work.

The first few days after winning the "Miss Pittsburgh" title, I was kept so busy that this little daily routine was entirely out of question. And I did miss it, so much. But now I have taken up this little duty again, and regardless of what engagements are made for me and what preparations I have to go through during the day in getting ready for the Atlantic City pageant next month, I always try hard to be home in time to do the cooking. Title or no title, I just can't change my everyday habits.

3 TURNED OVER TO CORONER IN MURDER

Three suspects in the murder early yesterday of Rocco Femia, 32, rear of 5112 Lytle street, were turned over to the coroner today, with four other men who will be questioned. The suspects are said to have threatened to "get" Famia two weeks ago.

The three are Laforte Laliosa, 3?, Sam Macris, 27, and James Cieciao, 29, all of Pitcairn. They were identified by Femia's widow last night as the men with whom he quarreled. Cieciao is alleged to have threatened Mrs. Femia and, when she told her husband, he went to Clairton and quarreled with the three men.

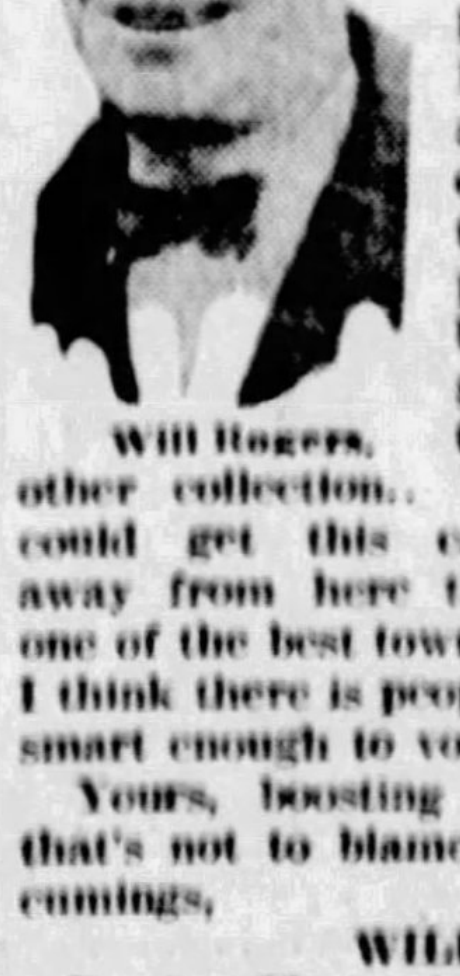
Capital Real Decent With Politicians Away, Says Will

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Tourists you are missing something if you don't visit Washington while the politicians are not here. You have no idea the difference it makes. The bootleggers have followed their constituents back home; the Embassy bars are closed; even Washington's national pest, the lobbyists, have gone home to take up another collection. Why, if they could get this capitol moved away from here this would be one of the best towns in America. I think there is people in this city smart enough to vote.



Will Rogers.

Yours, boosting for a town that's not to blame for its short comings,

WILL ROGERS.

RIOT AT DANCE; 10 FINED $415

Following a dance in Ruthenian Hall, McKees Rocks, the borough treasury is $415 riched today. Someone got the wrong idea of the nature of the affair and started a fight. Sally Gets Refusal of Aid From "Beau" and Millie; Sally Makes Sacrifice

SALLY JEROME, 20 and clever and pretty, is the prop and mainstay of her family which consists of MRS. JEROME; the twins, BEAU, the apple of his mother's eye, and MILLIE, a young siren; and Sally herself. Mrs. Jerome enjoys poor health so Sally does the housework mornings and office-work for MR PEEVEY downtown afternoons.

In the flat below the Jeromes lives TED SLOAN, an automobile salesman who wants Sally to marry him and keep on working. But the only man in whom she is interested is JOHN NYE whose office is just across the hall from Mr. Peevey's. Nye has hired the flirtatious Millie to be his secretary. Beau, who has been practically penniless for a week, suddenly blossoms out with some new clothes and ties to say nothing of a guitar. In addition, he lends Millie some money to buy Millie a new dress. Sally worries about the source of this mysterious wealth, for in his boyhood Beau often robbed his mother's purse. On a Monday morning she goes to work, and in the lobby of the building meets John Nye, just returned from his vacation. He tells her he is ready to put Millie to work immediately, and adds that he would much rather have had Sally.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

SALLY'S eyes widened. "Why, she's in bed, of course," she answered. "You knew she was sick when you left her this afternoon."

Millie shook her head. "Why, no, darling. You've got your dates mixed. She was all right this afternoon." She fibbed smoothly and convincingly. "Otherwise I'd never have left the house—"

She smiled straight down into John Nye's eyes. "Not even with you!" she said. "Mother always comes first with me. She always has."

And, leaving that brazen untruth to get in its work, she swayed out of the room like a tall lily blown in a breeze. John Nye's dark eyes followed her hungrily.

Sally saw that before she got out of the room—just how, she never knew.

But presently she was in the rear hall on her way to the bedroom at the back. There was a light in it, and Millie was standing before the dresser, carefully outlining her soft mouth with lipstick.

"I thought you were going in to see how Mother was," Sally said to her, and her voice was cold.

Millie looked bored. "Oh, don't be silly," she answered calmly. "I know there's nothing really the matter with her. She just stuffs herself, and then her tummy aches. I told her so this afternoon when she was yipping all over the place. Tell me lovey, have I too much red on my mouth?"

She swung around lightly, her skirts billowing out from her slender hips, and softly closed the bedroom door. Then she dived into the pockets of the white coat and showed Sally what she had brought home from her evening with John Nye.

"Honey, his pockets are just full of galloping dollars," she whispered joyfully. "He just doesn't know how to spend enough money. I forgot my vanity case and he stopped in at a jewelry store and bought me this! Isn't it lovely?"

"It" was a silver vanity case. A square one with a compartment for cigarets and matches, and cunning little rouge and powder puffs.

"Too bad I forgot my own, isn't it?" drawled Millie, and she winked one of her heavenly blue eyes. "Too bad—yee weekum!"

"Yee weekum" was Millie's way of saying "Yes, indeed!"

The next morning Sally held a family council at the breakfast table over the coffee and the chopped apple cake.

"I've got to have some money from you two this week," she said, looking gravely from Beau to Millie.

They both looked back at her wordlessly. They always were sulky and silent in the morning when they first got up.

It was fully three minutes before Beau growled that there wasn't any use in asking him for money just then.

"I owed most of my salary this week before I got it," he explained. "And then I took Mabel out to eat last night—and she sure can murder the menu. That meal made a $10 bill look like a postage stamp."

He grinned suddenly and took his fifth large piece of apple cake that Sally had bought with her own money.

Then he nodded at Millie, cross-looking and rosy as a baby, on the other side of the table.

"Why don't you ask Jessie James, the girl bandit, to lend you some?" he asked Sally. "She can borrow some from that new boss of hers who's got such a crush on her."

"Borrow!" repeated Sally. "Borrow! Why, you and Millie don't have to borrow from anybody. You make plenty—and all I ask you to do is to give me $10 every week. But I can't get you to do it, somehow."

Millie set her mouth firmly. "I'll give you my $10 when Beau gives you his," she declared. "And not one minute sooner!"

There was a long silence, broken by the drowsy buzz of a fly above the sunny table and the distant sound of church bells.

Beau got up abruptly and went out of the room.

His voice came back to them, sharp and strained. "Oh, my lord! I wish you'd stop talking about money. If you don't, I'm going to go crazy!"

Millie stared at Sally in astonishment. "Well, now what's the meaning of that?" she gasped. "Has he lost his blooming mind?"

Sally shook her head. She had seen the look of anxiety on Beau's face, and she knew that he hadn't "lost his blooming mind," but was only at his wits' end about something. . . . About money, of course.

Money and love—they were the only things that really mattered to people, weren't they?

Money—and love. She thought of John Nye and Millie and herself. The three of them.

CHAPTER XVI.

AS THE days went by Sally actually began to get thinner.

"Like some clinging-vine heroine of an old-fashioned novel!" she told herself with hot self-disgust the day she discovered that she had lost two pounds in a week.

If anyone had told her a month before that a sane and sensible girl could lost both flesh and sleep over a man she would have said "What rot!" and would not have believed it.

Even now she only half-believed it. "It's the heat," she told herself angrily. "How could I worry myself sick over a man whom I hardly know—and who is head, neck and heels in love with my own sister, besides? It's nonsense!"

But whether it was nonsense or not, her lips were slower to tilt up in their lovely winged smile, and a faint frown appeared in the blue depths of her eyes.

On the other hand Millie bloomed like a June rose all during the month of September.

Part of her bloom was due to Sally, who kept her clothes crisp and sweet-smelling in their cleanliness, and helped her to wash her yellow hair twice a week.

And then, Millie always was blooming and radiant when she was in love—or in what passed for love with her. As a matter of truth, the only person for whom she had a really overwhelming affection was her charming and useless self.

But she enjoyed having John Nye chained to her chariot wheels—and there was no doubt that he was chained there, a willing and infatuated captive. He showered books and candy and flowers on her, took her to lunch every day,

SAVED AFTER 30 HOURS IN WELL

VICTIM WILL LIVE, SAY DOCTORS

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Fred Leneau, the Auburn man imprisoned more than 30 hours in the cave-in of a well and rescued from his tomb 40 feet below the surface, will live, physicians said today.

With no bones broken, with only an arm and chest bruised, but completely exhausted, Leneau was "resting comfortably" at City Hospital today, thanking his lucky stars that he was alive.

Brought to the surface at 12:45 a. m., Leneau said: "I never gave up hope. I am grateful to my rescuers and to my God."

Mrs. Leneau was hysterical when her husband was brought to the surface, believing him dead. When she learned that he still lived, however, her grief turned into joy.

Leneau was dazed at first, as boards pressing against his chest had made breathing difficult. He had been imprisoned since 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening in the bottom of the shaft. The earth closed in around him and entombed him.

A large crowd at the mouth of the well burst into cheers when the rescue was completed. Shouting and blowing automobile horns, they followed the ambulance to the hospital.

Law Errs; Blood Test Proves Child Gypsy

OMAHA, NEB., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Blood has told. Little Rachel is a gypsy.

Rachel didn't realize today that science and the law had to determine who she was. Rachel is only a few months over two years old.

At Oakland, Neb., where the caravan of Peter John rested, there was joy. Two days ago officers pulled back the flap from the Gypsy wagon of Peter John and Peter John's wife and looked with suspicion upon the little girl, dressed so gayly, who played there.

The officers suspected Rachel had been kidnaped. Although Peter John and his wife protested, the law would have its way.

Then came word from Eureka, Cal., and Archer, Neb., that maybe Rachel was the child that had disappeared from one of these places. It was up to the law to decide.

Peter John readily agreed that a blood test be taken to decide whether Rachel were of Gypsy blood or not. It was not the Gypsy man's way; it was the white man's way; but Peter John was confident.

And the blood test told, according to Dr. A. P. Condon, Omaha surgeon, who made the test. The tests showed without a doubt that Rachel was of Gypsy blood, he said.

CAN'T LEGALLY HUNT BOBOLINKS THIS FALL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Bobolinks, known in the Southeast as reedbirds and ricebirds, cannot be legally hunted this fall, the Agriculture Department has announced. Permission to gun for them in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and states as far south as Fiordia has been revoked under $500 fine.

TROOPS RESCUE AMERICANS IN MEXICO

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—A party of 18 American and 11 British miners is reported to have been rescued by Mexican troops from a mob of Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers after they had seized the American-owned Amparo mines and forced all other foreigners in the community to flee, the State Department announced.

The miners barricaded themselves August 21 and grave fears were entertained for their safety. Refugees reaching Guadalajara, in the State of Jalisco, notified American and Mexican officials at the same time. Troops were rushed to the scene and a brief message from the American embassy in Mexico City states that the Mexican government had notified them troops had reached the mines, had the situation well in hand and that the foreigners were safe.

The agitation was first reported to the Department of State on August 21. "Red syndicates" were reported to be arousing the workers at the mines to take action against all foreigners if Sacco and Vanzetti were executed.

The Amparo mine is located at Etzatlan, Jalisco, near the towns of Piedrabola and Mazata and all foreigners were forced to flee from these villages during August 24. They brought the news of the plight of the beleaguered miners to Guadalajara.

The mine is owned by an American company with headquarters in Philadelphia.

LITA WOULD BE GUARDIAN

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Lita Grey Chaplin, who recently won an interlocutory decree of divorce from Charlie Chaplin, has filed a petition in Superior Court asking that she be appointed guardian of the estate of her two minor children, Sidney Earle and Charles Spencer Chaplin, Jr.

The estate involves proceeds of a $200,000 trust fund to be established by the children's father. The principal, $100,000 for each boy, will be delivered to them when Sidney Earle, a little more than a year old, reaches the age of 35. Charles Spencer, Jr., is a year older than his brother.

Sally's Shoulders

Sally Gets Refusal of Aid From "Beau" and Millie; Sally Makes Sacrifice and telephoned her every night at bedtime.

"I don't know why it is—but I certainly can get men as easily as the draft board," she said one Saturday night to Sally when four of her admirers had called her up, one after another, in quick succession.

There had been a time when Sally would have given her the answer that she wanted — when she would have told her that it was no wonder that men liked anyone so pretty and sweet as she was.

But tonight she was silent.

She went on washing the worn old silver and the chipped, mismatched dishes in the pan before her as if nothing in the world mattered to her just then but getting them clean.

"That was my Johnny on the 'phone just now. He wants me to go for a drive with him," went on Millie's soft little drawling voice. "And I haven't a thing to wear that he hasn't seen. Couldn't you lend me that new blue dress of yours?"

The blue dress was not a new dress. Sally had bought it six months before, and if Millie had worn a dress for six months she would now be calling it "that old rag." Her things wore out with amazing swiftness.

"Well, I was going to wear it myself tonight," Sally answered with her heavy eyes still on the blue and white cups that she was rinsing now with scalding water. "Ted wants me to go out dancing with him—and I said I would."

Millie put out her lower lip. "Haven't you anything else you can wear?" she asked mournfully. "John Nye has seen every thread I own, and I'd like to wear something different for a change."

"I haven't anything else but wash dresses and business clothes—and I hate to dance in the things I wear every day," answered Sally, who bought only three new dresses a year, and cheap ones at that.

"Well, why don't you wear a wash dress? You look so sweet in that green and white dimity of yours." Millie came close to her and put one arm caressingly around her shoulders. "Honey, please let me wear your blue dress. I do want to look nice for Johnny tonight."

In the end Sally let her have it, and put on the old dimity that was sure to look queer at this time of year, when everybody else had new fall frocks of silk and serge.

While she was dressing Mrs. Jerome came into the bedroom with Hugh Walpole's "Harmer John" in one hand and a large piece of chocolate cake in the other.

"I cut your cake," she said apologetically. "I hope you don't mind, Sally. It looked so good, cooling out there on the kitchen table, that I just couldn't resist it."

There was very little in the way of food that Mrs. Jerome could resist. After all, as she often said, there were only three of life's pleasures left to her—reading, eating and sleeping.

"Are you going out somewhere?" she asked suspiciously, her eyes going from Sally's face to the green-and-white dress laid out on the top of the bed.

Sally nodded and went on brushing the dark glossy waves of her hair.

"With Ted Sloan?"

Once more Sally nodded.

There was a long, heavy silence. Then Mrs. Jerome spoke sorrowfully from the doorway, her mouth full of cake.

"My, I wish you wouldn't see so much of that boy. First thing you know you'll be so tangled up with him that you'll find yourself married to him! And then what will become of me? Who'll take care of me—I'd like to know." Her voice, muffled by the cake she was munching, broke and died away on a dry sob.

Instantly Sally was beside her, all tenderness and pity, her slender young arms around her mother's plump settled figure, her smooth cheek against her mother's sagging one.

"Dearest, you know I'll never leave you," she said quietly, soothingly. "Haven't I told you that a hundred times? And I mean it. I'll never get married if it means leaving you."

Mrs. Jerome shook her head. "That isn't the question," she declared. "I don't want you to marry and ask me to come and live with you, either. I don't want to live with you after you're married. I know what men thinks of mothers-in-law. I know—"

"Well, then, I'll never get married. Will that satisfy you?" asked Sally, breaking in upon this wail. "I'll promise to be an old maid like Aunt Em, and take care of you always. I love you best of all the world, anyway, don't I?"

Still Mrs. Jerome was not contented. Her eyes were stern and curiously filled with doubt, even now.

"I don't want you to go out with that boy tonight," she said. "I don't fell well, and I don't want to be left alone." She popped the last delicious bit of the chocolate cake into her mouth as she spoke. "I shouldn't have eaten that cake," she added. "I'm going to bed now." And she went.

But five minutes later Sally heard her get up and go into the kitchen again.

Presently she came back to the bedroom door. "You'd better put that cake out of sight if you want any of it left for tomorrow," she said to Sally. "As long as it's where I can find it I'm going to keep nibbling at it. And it's sure to make me sick. You're not going out with Ted, are you?"

"Not if you're sick and afraid to be left alone," replied Sally, and went to hide the cake. Nearly a third of it was gone when she hid it under an old brown crock in the cupboard.

Ted Sloan had promised to come upstairs for her at 9 o'clock.

"I hate the thought of telling him that I can't go out," thought Sally at 10 minutes of 9. "He'll just sit around here and be sentimental all evening long."

As she stood there looking unhappily at the kitchen clock, the doorbell rang.

"That's probably Aunt Emily," Sally called to her mother as she ran to answer the door. Aunt Emily often dropped in on Saturday night when she had finished her weekly marketing.

Sure enough, it was Aunt Emily, loaded with paper bags and woven-string shopping bags.

She carried her burdens straight through the flat to the kitchen and banged them down on the table. Then she closed the door and faced Sally grimly.

"What mischief has Beau been up to?" she asked in a hissing whisper, and a quick throb of fear shook Sally to the bottom of her soul.

"Why?" she asked, on guard instantly, as she always was when anyone spoke ill of anyone in her family. She was loyalty itself to Beau and Millie and her mother.

Aunt Emily shrugged and sniffed. "He's been out at my house all this afternoon, trying to wheedle some money out of me, and he wouldn't tell me what it was for," said she. "He's just like his father. Always without a penny to bless himself with."

Sally bit her underlip and had nothing to say.

She could barely remember her father, but her dim recollection of him was of a man who carried her about on his shoulder, given her dimes for ice cream sodas, and taken her once to a glittering circus in a big hot tent that smelled of peanuts, pink lemonade, and dusty animals.

"Millie drove out to the house with some man or other on Thursday night, too," went on Aunt Emily. "She said she needed a new dress and that she'd had to turn in all her salary to pay the rent here."

"To pay the rent!" Sally spoke at last.

"Why, the rent isn't even paid for this month! Dad's check is late—"

"I'll bet it's late!" broke in Aunt Emily. "I tell you, Sally, you're playing a losing game here in this flat! I don't see why you try to keep this place together, when nobody in the family gives you any help at all! You'd better move your mother out to my house when I start this chicken-dinner business of mine, and let Beau and Millie shift for themselves. They could board somewhere. They're never home anyway, 's far as I can see. They don't need a home any more than a couple of alley cats need a home!"

"Hush!" whispered Sally. Through the screen door that opened onto the back porch she caught a glimpse of a lighted cigaret that she knew belonged to Ted Sloan.

"Here, Aunt Emily, take a look at this!" she cried, winking back the tears of doubt and humiliation that burned in her eyes like fire. "This is a new dance. It's not exactly a shimmy."

She began to dance there on the bare floor of the kitchen, slim legs flying and her fingers snapping as if in time to an invisible orchestra.

"Hello, Ted!" she cried with make-believe cheerfulness as he stepped into the kitchen. "We can't go out tonight, after all. Mother's not feeling very well and doesn't want to be left alone."

CHAPTER XVII.

AUNT EMILY had no use, whatsoever, for young Ted Sloan.

He was, she said, her idea of just nobody at all.

Her sharp eyes went over him now, taking him in point by point from his red hair slicked down with grease until it looked like tan leather, to his too-loud necktie and his too-wide trousers.

"All dressed up and no place to go, aren't you?" she snapped at him. Then she turned her back squarely and impolitely upon him and spoke to her niece.

"You didn't tell ME your mother was feeling badly!" she said accusingly. "What's wrong with her?" Aunt Emily always said that Sally kept things from her, and this was more or less true.

She kept all the unpleasant bits of news from her, simply as a matter of protecting the family from Aunt Emily's peppery, vinegary tongue.

"There's nothing much the matter with her, Auntie," she hurried to say. "But I made a chocolate cake tonight for supper, and she ate some of it and it upset her stomach."

"I'm all right now, though," came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the doorway. "I wasn't very sick anyway—just for a minute I thought I was going to be."

"Just long enough to spoil Sally's plans for the evening!" remarked Aunt Emily with a frank laugh. "I know you, Margaretta! —I remember how you kept me home from a party once upon a time when you were first married and still living in the old house. . . . Pretended you were sick until it was too late for me to go. Just because you were angry at not being invited!"

Mrs. Jerome's face seemed to wilt like a faded pink flower for an instant under Aunt Emily's stinging words. Then it brightened up as she spoke again:

"Now, just let Sally go out and dance tonight. She'll only be young once, you know. And you and I'll go out and see a show somewhere. I'll get a taxi so you needn't walk."

The prospect of an evening's enjoyment cheered Mrs. Jerome enormously, and she let Sally help her into her clothes and lace up her shoes for her.

"You don't need to call a cab," Ted said to Aunt Emily with a grand air. "I'll take you wherever you're going in my own car."

And so the four of them started out together, squeezed into his little rattling roadster.

Of all the dance places in town, the one Ted Sloan liked the best was "The Blue Lagoon."

"The Blue Lagoon" got its name from its azure walls with waves and gold-fish painted upon them, and from its deep sapphire-blue ceiling studded with star-like electric lights.

There was an orchestra that spun out a magic web of jazz music from 8 to 12 o'clock six nights a week, too; and a large pale-yellow floor that was like clouds under hundreds of young rhythmic feet.

All of this splendor could be had for the small sum of 5 cents a dance—and that, after all, was the thing that endeared "The Blue Lagoon" to the heart of young Mr. Ted Sloan. For, like millions of other young men across this broad United States, he wanted to show his best girl a good time on Saturday night and did not have much money to spend doing it.

Moreover there could not be a better place to spend an evening from the viewpoint of romance. For everything about the "Lagoon" spelled romance with a capital R—the soft lights, the low, disturbing music, the hundreds of couples drawn into each other's warm, eager, young arms for the dance itself.

"'Cherrie—Cherrie—my own,'" Ted Sloan sang low in Sally's ear as the orchestra beat out the slow measures of the last waltz of that last Saturday night in September. "'My love is for you alone'—It is, you know, Sally." His mouth was against the dark cloud of her hair.

"Oh, stop!" said Sally sharply. "Be yourself, Ted!" She was in no mood for love-making tonight of all nights. She never was in a mood for Ted's caresses, for the matter of that.

"And how!" Ted answered shortly and slangily. But he took his face away from her hair and began to whistle "Cherrie" to himself instead of singing it longingly in her ear. And that, Sally told herself thankfully, was a blessing.

She looked up at his face as the music came to an end and they stopped dancing. It had lost its look of tenderness and was grim and unsmiling.

"There was something that I was going to keep to myself," he said, unlocking his arm from hers and putting one hand into his trousers' pocket. "But I don't think I will."

He drew a pink slip of paper and a pale blue one from his pocket.

He handed her the pink slip, and she looked at it under the starry lights in the blue ceiling. It was a check for $110 made payable to Beauregard Jerome, and it was signed with Ted's name.

"But I thought you said you lent him only 10 buckerinos," said Sally, trying to speak lightly. But a fear, heavy and cold as chilled steel, had settled down over her heart.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Thief of Bagdad

DEAR MISS GALE:

May I say a few words to "Within The Law?"

I do enjoy reading your letters. Your chief point of view seems to be: "When in Rome do as the Romans do." That, of course, refers to your actions toward girls' petting or non-indulgence. You are not so dumb! I am a girl, although my beginning paragraph does not credit me with being such. I have always loved sports—tennis, swimming, basketball and dancing in particular. Although I am but 17 years old I have had four proposals of marriage. Yes, I know, Miss Gale, I am very young. I do not deny the fact, but I have, in my sixteen years, been thrown into the company of older people and now every one judges me to be at least 19.

You, "Within The Law," like blondes. I am a brunet, very French looking, and I despise all blondes, especially boys. If the shoe fits, put it on!

Now, listen to me! You are not "fast," you are just trying to keep up with "us moderns." Calm down. Be just your old self. I have awakened to the fact, I am tipping you off. Take it or leave it.

Now, Miss Gale, I wrote you once about my "steady" leaving town and not answering my three letters. Well, he has returned for more. He came out and found me enjoying life and not missing him, as you advised. We fought, Miss Gale, for I cannot forget his dirty trick. The best part is, he was away for four months and sixteen days and will not explain where he was or anything. I told him that I thought he was back with his first wife. That started the battle royal.

Well, I have saved enough so I will throw away my pen and sail away on my Magic Carpet of the Future and leave all to their fate. Thanks,

THE THIEF OF BAGDAD.

I hope you are through with this man now, my dear.

Two Decent Girls

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two very popular girls working in the same office together and we have just finished reading a decent fellow's letter in your lovelorn column. He says that Pennsylvania has the most beautiful girls he has ever seen and also that they very brazenly indulge in smoking and drinking. It seems quite strange that such a decent fellow should fall in with that type of a girl. It would not be for us to say that we are pretty girls, but nevertheless we are never in want of company or places to go and our company is always of the very best. We do not indulge in smoking and drinking, but yet we are not wall flowers or girls who are left at home. Our opinion of a decent fellow is that he is a very conceited somebody. With his high-powered buggy he seems to think that all girls are at his beck and call—no, not all.

A tip to this decent fellow is to get in with the right kind of a girl, so he will never have to stop and think, is she the right kind of a girl to bear my children.

Wishing you all the luck in the world and hoping you will answer soon, we are

TWO DECENT GIRLS.

Of course you can be popular without drinking and smoking.

Modern

DEAR MISS GALE:

I read the lovelorn every night and enjoy it immensely. I am a girl in my early teens and am a sophomore in high school. I agree with you about drinking, smoking and petting. Girls, wake up. You can be popular without petting and kissing I'm sure. Just try and see if it won't work. I don't see that it is any harm for the fellows to smoke. I think it is one of the pleasures of the boys and men. Just a word to Wise Moderns. You should be spending your time at home with your mothers or having good times with your girl friends. I hope this letter isn't too long. Wishing you health and success, I remain

MODERN.

I am very glad you agree with me, my dear.

Hick and Hayseed

DEAR MISS GALE:

This is the first time that we have entered your column.

We are two girls of 14 summers who disagree with two of your points of view. We smoke and neck, but do not drink, and are considered very popular with the opposite sex.

Now, Miss Gale, we are wondering what are the evils of necking.

Hoping to see this in print, we wish you luck.

HICK and HAYSEED.

You are just little girls, my dears, and should have no such worries at all. "Necking" is very cheapening. It makes you lose your own self-respect as well as the respect of the boys.

Lux

DEAR MISS GALE:

I met a girl at a party and fell in love with her immediately. I went with her several times since I met her, but recently I called her up and asked if I could come out to see her. She refused to let me visit her at her home. She has refused to go with me lately. Please tell me what I can do to win her back. Sincerely,

LUX.

If this girl refuses to see you, there isn't very much for you to do about it, is there? You might write to her, telling her how you feel and asking for a chance for a chance to make her like you. But if she refuses that, then you had better try to forget her.

MILADY BEAUTIFUL

By LOIS LEEDS

MOTH PATCHES AND LIVER SPOTS

THESE blemishes usually appear in later life. They are akin to freckles in substance, but they are deposited in deeper layers of the subcuticle. Their true origin is not well understood, but sometimes they may be bleached by simple local applications. In other cases their appearance seems to be connected with the use of chemical irritants or of some organic disease, especially liver complaints, and when the trouble is corrected the brown patches fade out. When, however, the blemishes respond neither to constitutional treatment nor to bleaches they may be removed by electrolysis or other drastic measures employed by skin specialists.

The following treatment is often helpful in bleaching these dark pigmented areas when they are not of the stubborn variety: After cleansing the skin at bedtime massage with a lemon or cucumber bleaching cream for several minutes. Wipe off the cream and pat on a little lotion made of one dram zinc sulphate and four ounces rose water. Allow this to dry on the skin. Next apply zinc ointment thickly to the dark spots and let it remain on all night. The next morning wash off the salve and pat more of the lotion. Dust with face powder. This treatment should be repeated daily for two or three weeks at least before results are expected. At the end of the period the spots will probably be lighter in color. Keep up the applications until they seem to be bleached as light as possible. It is not likely that they will disappear entirely.

When moth patches or liver spots appear on the face they may be partially concealed by a judicious use of makeup. Do not apply a pink or white shade of powder to these spots if your skin is sallow, but use a brunette powder so that the dark patch may be lightened to the shade of the rest of the face. If the blemish is on the cheek use a little rouge over and around it.

Liver spots often occur as a pigmented streak on the forehead. In such cases they may be effectually concealed by a bang or wave of hair arranged low over the brow. Hats with fairly wide brims cast a friendly shade over faces discolored with spots here and there.

Of course, merely to conceal these blemishes does not remedy them. One should have a physical examination by a physician to ascertain whether there is an internal condition that may be considered as the cause of the patches, and if so, whether it may be cured by medication. Sometimes the dark spots are scars by X-ray or chemical burns and they may be obliterated by a skin-grafting operation.

Horoscopes

SUNDAY, AUG. 28, 1927.

This is read as a fairly favorable day in planetary direction, although astrologers warn to avoid excesses of any sort and to beware of sunstroke or accidents.

The rule is most fortunate to women, who are supposed to have their own way while this sway prevails.

There is a fairly good sign for churches, who will benefit after the summer vacations.

In the evening of this day romance will flourish, the seers predict, and many an engagement to marry may be formed.

Under this direction of the stars holiday flirtations may assume serious angles and he who values freedom will be cautious today.

This should be an auspicious rule under which to visit friends or to make social plans.

It is a first rate date to contemplate the family budget for the coming autumn and again the seers counsel thrift and economy.

Even at this early date astrologers foretell that the partial eclipse of the sun and the total eclipse of the moon next December will presage severe storms.

The new year will be most favorable to theaters, motion pictures and all forms of amusements.

Fearful loss of life through an earthquake or because of war is foretold as a probability early in 1928.

All the signs for the United States are read as presaging the most phenomenal growth with general prosperity.

If it were not for Saturn's influence arousing human greed the world would now be most happy, for Venus is in a place supposed to encourage peace, good will and wide-reaching fellowship.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of many new clothes and much unexpected pleasure in the coming year of their lives.

Children born on this day probably will be unusually artistic and diplomatic. Both boys and girls should be successful in their esthetic ambitions.

MONDAY, AUG. 29, 1927.

This is a day of big possibilities accompanied by severe hazards, according to astrology. It is a time for care and caution.

Early in the morning the aspects encourage wise planning and assure clear vision regarding the future.

Women are well directed through the early hours of the day, which should be most auspicious for business.

There is a promising sign for dealings in lands or stocks if the most conservative methods are followed.

Temptation to speculate may be strong, but warning is given that it is likely to entail severe losses.

New fortunes will be made suddenly in the coming months, but they will be acquired by means of practical and stable commercial processes, astrologers foretell.

This is read as a favorable date for weddings, since love is likely to last and wealth to come.

Advertising is well directed and it should be especially beneficial to theaters and all other places of amusement.

Personal publicity, also, is supposed to be peculiarly effective, if obtained while this configuration prevails.

It will not be most unlucky to contract bills or obligations under this direction of the stars, which makes for exact and careful buying.

Food now will claim attention and the fashion of dieting will spread because of practical as well as esthetic reasons.

The high cost of living is surely to vex heads of families and possessors of small incomes, astrologers announce.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of an important year in which they will profit through real estate.

Children born on this day probably will be extremely clever and ambitious. They will desire to make the best possible appearance.

WHAT'S the ANSWER?

1. What is a thrall?
2. What French painter of the nineteenth century is famous for the microscopic detail of his painting?
3. Who first held the title of President of the United States?
4. In what country is the rabbit a pest?

10. For whom is Pennsylvania named? What does the name mean?

The answers to these questions may be found in Monday's paper.

Here are the answers to yesterday's questions.

1. According to the calendar introduced during the French Revolution, the 28th of July, 1794, was the Ninth Thermidor. It is important because, on that day occurred the downfall of Robespierre and the end of the Reign of Terror.
2. Annie Laurie was a real person. She was born in 1682, and was the daughter of Robert Laurie, a baronet. The song was written by Douglass Finland, one of her admirers. But she married his rival, Alexander Ferguson.
3. The custom of drinking healths can be traced back to the days of Edward the Martyr, of England, in 975. In those days when a man stood up to drink a health, he exposed himself to being stabbed, so the one next to him stood up with drawn sword as his pledge. The custom spread, and we still stand up when drinking a health.
4. In England an ell measures 45 inches. It varies from 27 to 48 inches in other European countries.
5. The Green Mountain Boys were the men from Vermont who followed Ethan Allen during the American Revolution.
6. "Antipodes" denotes either those living on the other side of the globe, or the places on the earth's surface exactly opposite each other.
7. Xylonite is better known as celluloid.
8. "Ye Olde Cheshire Cheese," a famous London tavern, derives its chief fame from the fact that it was much frequented by Dr. Samuel Johnson.
9. Niccolo Gabrini Rienzi (1313-1354) was a Roman tribune and reformer. He has been called "the last of the Tribunes."
10. Europa was a sister of Cadmus, who was carried off to Delphi by Zeus in the form of a white bull.

Corn Chowder

Cut the corn from a dozen ears, which should yield about three pints. Boil the cobs twenty minutes in enough water to cover them, then strain off the liquid. Lay seven thin slices of salt pork in the chowder kettle, cook five minutes, then put in a layer of thinly sliced onions, next a layer of sliced potatoes, then a layer of corn. Dot with little lumps of butter, season with pepper, salt and sugar. Cover with a layer of broken pilot crackers, then pour over a pint of rich milk and a pint of the corn water. Last of all pour in three tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed smooth in a half cupful, or a little more, of cream. Bring to boiling point, then cook gently for thirty minutes. Sprinkle over a few more pieces of the broken cracker and, if the chowder seems at all dry, add a little more of the corn water. Cook five minutes more, then it is ready to serve.

Peach Tapioca Cream

Peel and slice 1 quart ripe peaches, or canned peaches may be used. Sprinkle with sugar and let stand 3 hours. Make tapioca cream, using 1 pint milk, 3 tablespoons prepared tapioca, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs, pinch salt. When milk comes to boiling point stir in tapioca and sugar and cook in double boiler ½ hour. Beat yolks 2 eggs with little cold water, add to hot tapioca, stir well and remove from stove immediately. Let it get thoroughly cold before stirring in peaches.

YOUTH, YOUTH, GOLDEN YOUTH!

THROUGH the SPORT LENS by HAVEY BOYLE

Havey J. Boyle.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—A ride of 37 miles from the loop district in a southerly direction brings you to the Lincoln Fields race track at Crete, Ill., where Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion of the world, is preparing assiduously to regain the title he lost a year ago to Gene Tunney.

There are forbidding gates, guarded by an attendant who against all tradition is reasonable and polite. He looks at the credential presented as if he still has a notion that four out of five, besides having trouble with their gums, are also honest. He admits the man with the credential.

You walk in, leaving outside possibly two or three hundred persons who are apparently expecting a miracle which will allow them entrance. This gives one the snug feeling of achieving what all others have failed to achieve, until once the race course is reached, when one discovers there are more people inside than outside. The private workouts are about as private as a bargain basement sale.

IN A shaded part of the lawn is a boxing ring. Adjacent to it are paraphernalia designed to help put boxers in shape, pulling machines, a punching dummy and a punching bag. Workmen are rearranging the ring as the former champion has decreed it is too high.

On the porch of the race track club house are women and men and closer to the ring at vantage points are small groups of men and women awaiting the appearance of the former champion, now inside the club house, the word spreads, donning his training regalia.

STAGE craftsmen must be right in the way they lead to the entrance of the star. Seldom does the star appear on the scene just as the curtain rises. Preparations, such as the entrance and exits of maids and butlers, and other minor characters, are made by the playwright to put the spectator in the proper mood for the entrance of the leading character.

Thus it is, too, at Dempsey's camp. A man named Gus Wilson, a name you know, comes out of the club house with arms full of boxing gloves, towels, a punching bag and ropes. He takes a look at the ring, soon to hold the former champion, and finds the ropes are loose. Other small details take up his time. The observer, noting the lack of speech from the characters, gets the impression he is watching a queer pantomime.

FOLLOW then a small group of heavyweights, accoutred in headgears to protect ears already, it would seem, neglected, and to help diminish the force of the punches they expect to receive from their master, Dempsey.

Now all this has happened gracefully, naturally. There has been nothing stagy about this. Yet a playwright could not have improved upon it for natural sequence, leading up to an important event. Now out comes Dempsey. There is handclapping. Eyes from all points focus on the former champion, who loses little time in getting to work.

HE IS detained just a moment by friends who insist upon being recognized. Dempsey knows them, and, realizing just how his friends appreciate public recognition, he emphasizes the first names of two or three of them. He knows human nature well enough to know that by such an easy gesture he is giving his friends a very happy moment because many others in the crowd secretly sigh enviously over the luck of the favored ones who know and are known by the former champion of the world.

Dempsey punches the bag expertly, of course, and then takes to pulling on a pulling machine. In all this he is timed by Wilson, who yells "time" when he deems Dempsey has had enough. A respite from this work is granted and Dempsey is not still a second before the faithful Luvadis is wiping Dempsey's dark brow with a white towel and almost lovingly throwing a bathrobe over the Dempsey shoulders, not entirely dissimilar to the fond mother who tucks a youngster in bed as a cold night wind howls outside.

THERE follows a session with the sparring partners, with Dempsey working earnestly under whispered tutelage of Leo P. Flynn, the pooh-bah of the camp. Flynn is the man, you remember, who was called in to help Dempsey make ready for Sharkey. He has been re-engaged for a second run.

Third-Place Pirates In Two Games Today

The Inside Story of DEMPSEY'S 'COMEBACK'

By Leo P. Flynn, Manager and Trainer of the former heavyweight Champion

(Copyright, 1927, by Universal Service)

CHAPTER VIII.

THE wild squawk that Jack Sharkey let loose after his knockout by Jack Dempsey came as no surprise to me. I knew it was on the way at the end of the sixth round, and so did Dempsey.

Dempsey took his first punch at Sharkey's head in the sixth, but he did not connect squarely. By this time, the great crowd sensed that the tide of battle had changed. So did Sharkey. I could tell by the way he was fighting that his spirit was broken. When Dempsey came back to the corner I called the turn.

"This is the round to go out and finish him, Jack," I whispered. "That guy is getting ready to fold up. I can tell by the way he's acting that he's getting ready to holler foul. Let him have a couple more in the bread basket, and then give him everything you've got on the chin."

As Jack left the corner I called after him:

"Don't forget now! Step back on your right foot."

You may not know that Dempsey is a natural southpaw. He hits harder with his left than any heavyweight that ever lived. I wanted him to be set for this punch. I wanted it to be the hardest blow he had ever struck.

SOLAR PLEXUS FINISHER

The punch that softened Sharkey for that final left on the jaw was a right hand in the solar plexus. I think I can prove it.

The biggest point that Sharkey advanced in support of the contention that he was fouled is that he suffered internal hemorrhages for days after the fight.

What will Mr. Sharkey say when I tell him that EVERY SPARRING PARTNER WHO WORKED WITH DEMPSEY HAD THE SAME EXPERIENCE?

The trouble with Sharkey was that he was hit with a real good right in the stomach. He had never stopped anything with such power behind it and he didn't know that anyone could hit that hard.

He could not understand it, so he concluded it must have been crooked.

So far as I know, no one has accused Dempsey of fouling his sparring partners.

I don't give Sharkey much credit for the attitude he took. He tried to take away the glory which Dempsey richly deserved to furnish himself with an alibi.

SHARKEY GETS GOOD COUNT

Sharkey's mouth popped open from that right hand. He must have thought that some one had bumped him with a five-ton truck. He dropped his guard and turned his head to squawk, and, as he did, Jack soaked him with the hardest left on the jaw I ever saw. That was the stiffener. Sharkey went down as if he'd been shot.

Referee O'Sullivan could have counted to 60, and he still would have been on the floor. As it was, Sharkey got a plenty long count.

Even Sharkey can't throw any asparagus at that left hand. I don't think anyone ever has seen a prettier exhibition of co-ordination than Dempsey gave in delivering that blow. Everything about it was perfect. Dempsey hit that one from his heels.

I never felt like kissing a man in my life, but I came pretty close when Dempsey came back to our corner. There were tears in his eyes—tears of happiness.

"Well, kid, I did what you told me," he exclaimed joyously.

He certainly did. He did more than I told him. All the telling in the world wouldn't do any good if it hadn't happened that the fighter I told it to was the gamest man that ever pulled on a glove—also the best puncher that ever lived.

My small part was to get him in shape, and I am satisfied that I did that.

WILL KNOCK OUT TUNNEY

There is an old saying that a little man can cut a bigger man down to his size.

In the case of Sharkey vs. Dempsey my theory was that the older man could slow the younger man down to his speed. An application of the almost forgotten science of body punching was my prescription, and it did the work.

Long before the Sharkey fight I predicted Dempsey would score a knockout. Everyone laughed.

Now I'm going to make the same prediction on the Gene Tunney bout, and I think I'll be taken a little more seriously. I mean what I say, and I'm going to point out a few facts that have been overlooked.

(To Be Concluded Monday.)

DONOHOE, CRIBBS TO PLAY FOR FRANKFORD "PROS"

Carnegie Tech and Grove City College grid stars of last season will play side by side under the banner of the Frankford Yellow Jackets in the National Professional Football League this fall, it was learned here yesterday when it was announced that Bill Donohoe and Bill Cribbs had been signed by the Philadelphia eleven. Donohoe, as a half-back at Tech, pained Notre Dame and certain West Penn rivals considerably, and Cribbs was considered a backfield in himself while playing fullback for Grove City.

Cribbs and Donohoe will join Frankford on September 10.

E. JACOBS TO STUDY AND PLAY HERE

By HARRY KECK, Sports Editor.

THE University of Pittsburgh, noted in recent years for its strong tennis squads, including such stars as Dave O'Loughlin, Byron Baur, Arnold Silverman and others, will be further strengthened in this department by the acquisition of a player of national tournament reputation, it was learned today.

The player in question is Eddie Jacobs of Baltimore, who plans to matriculate for the fall term. He will not be eligible for varsity competition until next year.

Jacobs was the national indoor boys' champion in 1925 and was just beaten out by Frank X Shields of New York in the final round for the national junior outdoor title this year. He recently won one set from Manuel Alonso, the international star, and played Billy Johnston of California three close sets in the national senior championship tournament last year. He was the runner-up for the national municipal championship in 1925 and the city champion of Baltimore last year.

BROTHER IS CHAMPION

Jacobs is coming to Pitt through the efforts of Arnold Silverman, also of Baltimore, who captained the Pitt racqueters of two years ago. Silverman also sent the Panthers Morton Baker of Baltimore, who captained last year's Pitt freshman team, and another Baltimore star may follow Jacobs here. He is Louis Levin.

Billy Jacobs, younger brother of Eddie, recently won the national boys' outdoor championship.

ASK THE DOC—HE KNOWS

One of the few men who had the correct dope on the Dempsey-Tunney fight last year and profited materially thereby is Dr. Harry M. Goehring of this city, and, as a result, he has been besieged recently by friends and even has received letters from distant points asking him what he thinks of the return battle between the former heavyweight champion and his successor. To all he has given the reply that he hasn't yet made up his mind, but the suspicion exists that he has an idea about his favorite for the battle. He plans to visit Chicago shortly and will go to the training camps of both men while there and should be a good man to get hold of for some inside information when he returns.

The good doctor had it figured out just right last year in that he contended Dempsey's physical condition was not good and that he had lost his muscular co-ordination through lack of ring activity. He knows condition when he sees it, for he examined the boxers on the local cards over a long period some years ago. He was not overly impressed with Dempsey's showing against Sharkey, although the erstwhile Manassa Mauler won in the seventh round, yet he refuses to commit himself to a final word on Dempsey's chances against Tunney in their second clash until after he sees both at work in their camps.

Third Hit of Season Earns Moore $300 Bet From Ruth

By Universal Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 27.—Wiley Moore of the Yanks made a $300 base hit when he beat out a slow roller down the third base line in the eighth inning of yesterday's game with the Tigers at Navin Field. Wiley had a wager with Babe Ruth. The Bambino bet him $300 against $15 that Cy would not get three hits all season. The hit was his third. Incidentally, all three hits were made at Navin Field.

BUCS SEEK TO AVENGE JOLTS BY BRAVES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE,
Staff Correspondent.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—In third place looking up at the Cubs and Cardinals, the Pirates were not good company today as they made ready for another doubleheader with the Braves.

At the outset of yesterday's scrap with the Tribe the Bushwhackers gave indications of gaining half a step on the Cubs, but bad base-running coupled with over-anxiousness resulted in one more defeat at the hands of Bancroft's gang of hustlers.

The Pirates had two men caught at the plate in the first inning when they planted four ringing hits and a base on balls and made only two runs. It might not have been poor judgment on the bases inasmuch as the Braves flashed snappy baseball on the defensive, but the spectacle of two runners being nailed between third and home certainly did not smack of championship flavor so far as the Pirates were concerned.

HILL TO PITCH OPENER.

But the Pirates will strive to undo the reverse today. Manager Bush will send Carmen Hill out to defi the Tribe in the first game. Either Vic Aldridge or Emil Yde will be ready for the second contest, although there is a chance that Joe Dawson will go to the mound in the nightcap.

HEAVYWEIGHT PRELIMS PLANNED FOR BIG SHOW

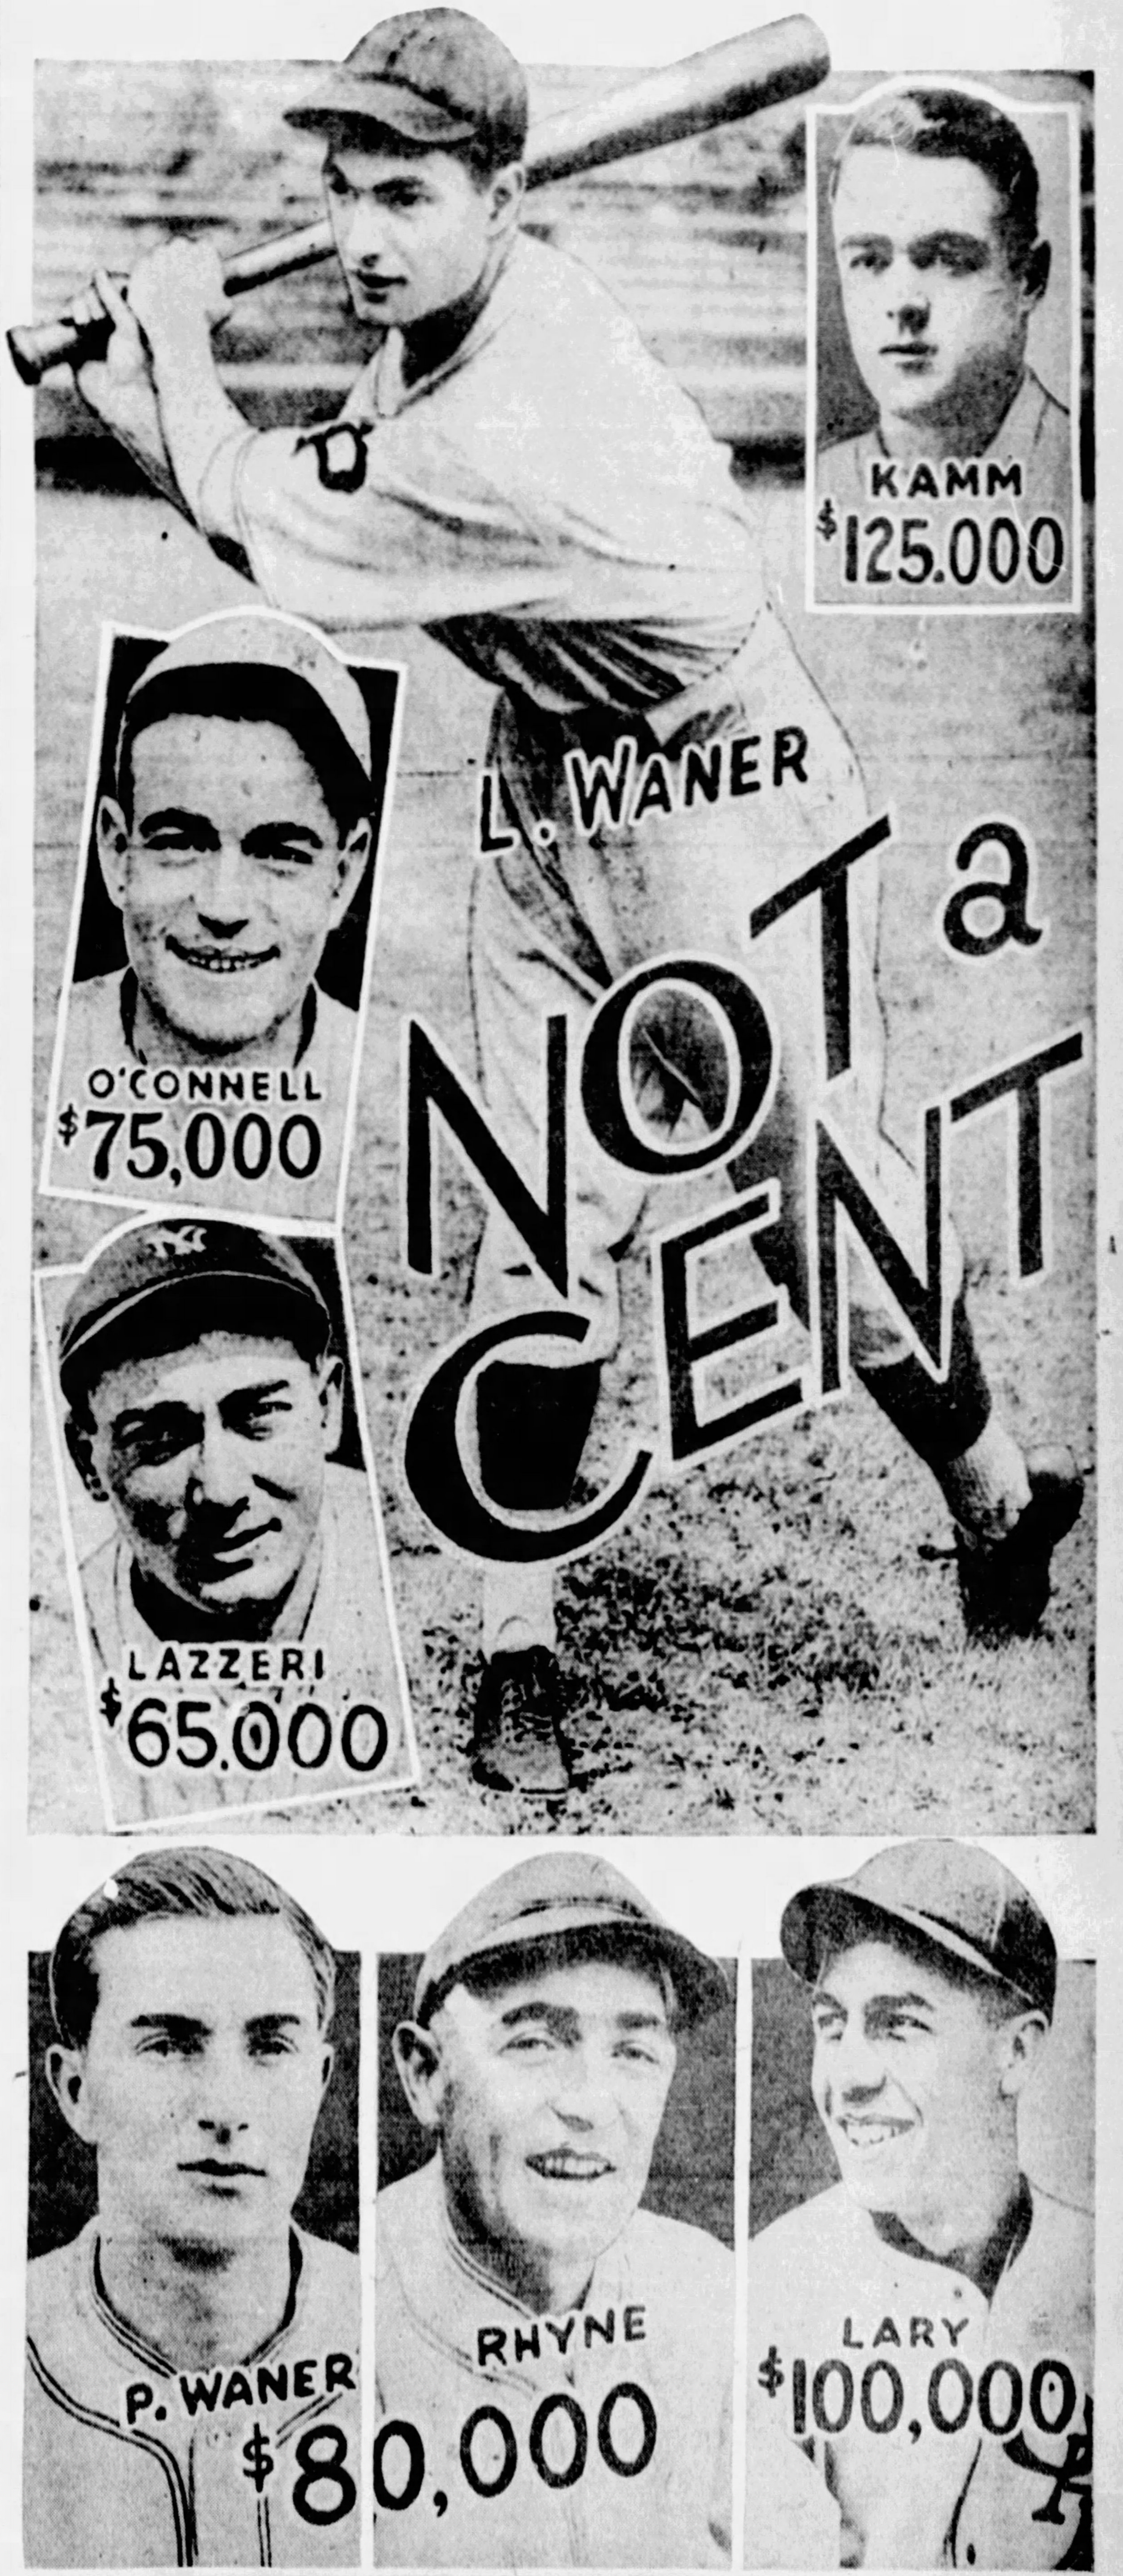
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Folks who attend the Dempsey-Tunney show in Chicago next month will see a number of Eastern heavyweights in action. Illinois boxing has produced no heavyweights of promise, as there have been few boxing programs featuring big men staged in Chicago since the sport was legalized.

The preliminaries for the heavyweight title fuss are being sketched out by Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Madison Square Garden. Among the talent he has lined up are Monte Munn, Johnny Grosso, Jimmy Braddock, George La Rocco, Wyoming Warner and Benny Touchstone. The pairings will be announced next week.

NOTRE DAME TO CONTINUE USE OF SHIFT THIS FALL

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Knute Rockne expects his Notre Dame football eleven this fall to use the shift as effectively at ever, despite the one-second pause required by the 1927 rules, he told coaches attending the summer football course at Northwestern University yesterday.

A discussion of the shift by Coach Rockne and Richard Hanley, Northwestern University's football mentor, closed the course. Coach Hanley opposed the shift.



BARGAIN DAY, CHRISTMAS, OR BOTH.

The Pacific Coast League has supplied the majors with more "stars" than any other minor circuit, but at a price—yes, what a price! Baseball stars, like those of the heavens, generally come high, but it must have been Christmas and bargain day combined when the Pirates landed Lloyd Waner. Lloyd, last spring a San Francisco castoff, today is one of the 10 leading batters in the National League and one of the most skillful fly-chasers in the majors. He cost the Pirates whatever ink it took to write his name on the club roster. To contrast the achievements of NOT-A-CENT Lloyd with those of the high-priced beauties pictured above is to prove the game's fascinating uncertainty. Willie Kamm, for whom the White Sox paid $125,000, is playing third base in a fairly creditable manner, but he never was the sensation that Lloyd Waner is today. Jimmy O'Connell, a $75,000 Giant purchase, now is playing the outfield in an outlaw circuit. Tony Lazzeri seems to be worth the $65,000 the Yankees paid for a man to fill the second base hole, and Lyn Lary is a San Francisco shortstop worth, according to recent market quotations, $100,000. Paul Waner and Hal Rhyne, outfielder and utility infielder, respectively, netted 'Frisco $80,000 in Pirate money, and of all these, only Paul is able to outshine his not-a-cent brother.

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—There was a [illegible] touch to the defeat of the Pirates yesterday. The best baserunner in the league trying to keep warm on the bench, the Freebooters resembled a bad baserunning team as they [illegible] against the skill and resourcefulness of Bancroft. Dave has to have all the breaks to turn the trick but just the same he was out there trying to force things his way.

BANCROFT and Donnie Bush apparently had words as Vic Aldridge was shelled off the hill in the first inning. In any event, Umpire McCormick took a hand in the argument. Barry walked toward Bancroft as if to warn him about something. Dave coached on first base which is directly in front of the Pittsburgh dugout.

THE Pirates don't shape up like a flag contender with Cuyler, Harris and Smith out of the lineup. Cuyler's speed on the paths, his speed in the outfield and general fielding ability are missing in the daily battles while the infield seems to sink to the level of a mediocre ball team when Joe Harris is out. Gooch is catching good ball but he is overworked to some extent. Eddie Farrell showed the Pirates some smart baseball in winning the game in the eighth. With Fournier on second with the winning tally and none out Eddie tried to bunt, but fouled the ball. Instead of holding to the old army game at all costs, Eddie swung at one and a base hit was the result. Let us hope the Pirates took due notice of that play. Miljus pitching up to the Fournier double of the eighth had Boston scribes all agog. John turned back the local swatters with consummate grace and his fielding of bunts and other bounds made him look like top money in this department. If John had not seen Gooch dive for Welsh's tap in the seventh, the scratch that tied the score he might have stopped the batter as he was in a better position to throw.

A LOCAL paper carries a feature story on Miljus relative to an incident when he was literally shelled off the mound. It happened after the Eightieth Division had first been put in the front lines. After ten days of service in the danger sector of the division was called out for a rest. The Blue Ridgers were billeted with the British forces at the time as when they went into a rest area the Eightieth boys were challenged by a Canadian outfit which thought it had a fine baseball team. The Canucks did not know that Miljus, Joe Harris and one or two other stars were members of the Eightieth band. Well, the game was arranged and Miljus was asked to pitch. John was in rare condition and for several frames not a batter reached first base, while the Americans had scored a flock of runs. "I thought I was on my way to a perfect game with nobody reaching first," said John. "My fast ball was popping and Joe was having a lot of fun watching the Canucks swinging. But out of a clear sky came a Jerry in a plane and right over the lot he flew. When he got over the park he laid an egg if you know what I mean. I have been yanked out of more than one ball game, but I didn't need any sign from a manager on that occasion. When that shell landed I think we broke some speed records in getting out of the way. Yes, sir, that's once I was shelled off the mound and how."

Many Events Being Staged

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

TRACK and field events for both sexes, a modified marathon run, amateur boxing bouts and a varied athletic program for minions of the law were on the card this afternoon at the University of Pittsburgh stadium, marking the largest police field meet in the history of the city. It is being staged to benefit the Pittsburgh Police Pension Fund.

A galaxy of athletes appeared primed for their events and the competitions in each event should be waged keenly.

Of the clubs who have representatives afield are Pittsburgh Athletic Association, P. and L. E. Edgar Thomson Steel A. A., Westinghouse Club, Willow Club, Swissvale A. C., New York Central A. A. and several others. Those are competing for a point trophy.

Two out-of-town teams are on hand. Four girls from Philadelphia, representing the Pennsylvania Railroad Athletic Association, are here to participate in the century dashes, baseball throw and relay. They are the Misses Ruth Waldner, Mary Tierney, Anna C. Reis and Dorothy F. Zelders. The other squad is made up of male athletes and came here from near-by Uniontown.

The tug-o'-war and the heavyweight boxing championship featured the competition among the blue coats themselves.

The affair got under way with a modified marathon run from No. 16 engine house at Penn and Lang avenues, East End, the runners coming in by way of Penn to Fifth, in Fifth to DeSota and up DeSota through the athletes' entrance into the stadium where they finished with two laps around the bowl.

Following was the lineup for the amateur boxing bouts:

112-pound class—W. Evans, Swissvale A. C., vs. W. Magarrell, Willow Club.

126-pound class—John McClernan, Uniontown, vs. John Haggerty, Willow Club.

135-pound class—Mike Hogan, unattached, vs. A. Andruect, Willow Club.

146-pound class—Russell Verge, Willow Club, vs. Leo Kybursky, Swissvale A. C.

160-pound class—Ray Beatty, Uniontown, vs. John Collins, unattached.

Heavyweight class—George Hook, traffic squad, vs. Harry Myers, traffic squad.

Mayor Charles H. Kline is honorary director of the meet, and Director of Public Safety James M. Clark is honorary referee. William S. Haddock, president of the A. M. A., A. A. U., is the official referee in charge, and John T. Taylor, secretary of the A. M. A., is the starter.

DAVIES WINNER IN TOURNEY

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Willie Davies, of Charleroi, Pa., flyweight champion of his state, survived the first round of the world's championship elimination tournament to provide a successor to the retired Fidel LaBarba here last night when he won the decision over Corp. Izzy Schwartz, of New York, at the end of a 10-round bout.

SOCCER

by TOM BIRKS

THE West Penn Soccer Referees' Association will hold its monthly meeting this evening at the Hotel Henry at 8 o'clock. President Bob Brown requests all members to be on hand as the business is important.

A number of exhibition games are carded for today, but practically all are out of the city proper. The Pittsburgh Soccer Club will use the Westinghouse High School field for its practice games.

Two other meetings have been called for next week. The Monongahela section will stage a session, while the Westmoreland County Loop also will try to get away to a good start in the matter of enrollment.

GRAYS IN TWIN BILL

The Homestead Grays, who last evening suffered a 7-5 defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Hornets, will attempt to gain revenge this afternoon when they meet their conquerors in two games at Forbes Field.

GAME AT GARFIELD

Tomorrow at Garfield Park the Fort Pitt, Triple Linkers, will play Tom Brown's colored All Stars of Youngstown.

EMULATES FATHER

HOWDY WILCOX, JR.

First son of a noted automobile racing driver to follow in his father's footsteps in the hazardous profession of breaking records on the speedways. His father, Howard (Howdy) Wilson, Sr., was killed when his car crashed over the top of the Altoona Speedway after he had gained international fame as the winner of the Indianapolis and other big races. Young Wilcox, who hails from Indianapolis, where he began his racing career, is one of the entrants in the 25 and 75-mile derbies at the Bridgeville Speedway Labor Day afternoon.

TEX'S $100,000 RENT TO HELP PAY EXPENSES

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—The $100,000 rental Tex Rickard will pay for Soldier Field, the lake front stadium in which he will stage the Tunney-Dempsey heavyweight championship fight, September 22, will go "to help meet the expenses" of the $6,000,000 memorial.

Such was the explanation today of B. E. Sunny, vice-president of the South Park Board, which has jurisdiction over the field.

Many American Legionnaires and others have demanded that the rental be applied toward a war memorial which would be erected inside the stadium.

"The stadium cost $6,000,000 and the interest on the bonds issued to pay for it is approximately $660 a day," said Sunny, who also is head of the Illinois Bell Telephone system. "If we add depreciation, repairs, supervision, policing, etc., the outlay is about $850 a day. The $100,000 will be used, as will the rental from other tenants, to help meet the expenses."

GENE TO START FOR CHICAGO SEPT. 1

SPECULATOR, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Gene Tunney will break camp here and leave for Chicago September 1, he announced definitely today.

Every effort was made to hold Tunney in Speculator over Labor Day, the end of the summer season. Members of the Chicago fight committee, meanwhile, were busy burning up wires and pestering Billy Gibson as to when the champion would arrive. According to the fight rules, Tunney was due within the bounds of Illinois by September 1.

Rumors that he would fly to Chicago were laughed at by Tunney.

"Nothing like that this time," he said. "At least not now. I'll have a private car for myself and friends on the regular train and go right through."

The champion does not expect to stop over in Chicago, but will proceed directly to his new training quarters at the Cedar Crest Country Club.

There was no workout today. Tunney arose early, did a few miles on the road then motored to Saratoga for the races.

GROSSO REPLACES CAVALIER

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(INS.)—Johnny Grosso, Mt. Vernon heavyweight, has departed for Speculator, N. Y., to replace Paul Cavalier as Gene Tunney's chief sparring partner. Reports from the champion's camp have it that Cavalier is all worn out and needs a rest. Grosso, who is under the management of Billy Gibson, will accompany Tunney to the Chicago training camp next week.

DEMPSEY HAS BLACK EYE

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—(UP.)—Another strenuous afternoon of boxing was in prospect for Jack Dempsey today following the decision of his manager, Leo P. Flynn, that the former heavyweight champion "needs a lot of fighting" to prepare him for his attempted "comeback" against Gene Tunney.

Dempsey was possessor of a black eye today, a mark of battle for which he could not fix responsibility because his sparring partners came and went so rapidly.

He had an easy time in two rounds with Benny Kruger, the German heavyweight, but Jack McCann of St. Paul was more difficult. McCann's straight left and right cross landed with effect and he was dismissed after one round.

K. O. Christner succeeded McCann and the Akron fighter was severely battered. Dempsey concentrated on Christner's head, smashing with both hands. Christner offered little in return.

Dempsey's principal weakness is believed to be inability to shoot for the face, and his handlers believe he can overcome it only by practicing on the features of his sparring partners.

Dempsey also must remove some weight—about 10 pounds of the 202 he is now carrying. He panted hard during the workout yesterday and did not appear to be standing the exertion as he should.

A crowd of 300 watched the workouts. Among them were Col. Matt Winn, owner of the Lincoln Fields racing plant; Larry Semon, the movie comedian, and Havey Boyle, a member of the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission and of the staff of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

NEW EAGLE, UNIVERSAL PLAY FOR TITLE TODAY

The district elimination series champions in class A will be decided at 2:30 this afternoon, when the New Eagle and Universal clubs clash at Firemen's Field, Verona, in the series final. Universal, previously defeated by the Tri-Borough Travelers, got back into the race yesterday when the commission ruled that the Travelers had used an ineligible player in gaining their victory.

MID-ATLANTIC SCORERS TO PICK BEST PLAYER

Official scorers of the Mid-Atlantic League will meet in Pittsburgh tonight to select the most valuable player of the Daily circuit, the title of which carries a prize of $100. The selection probably will be made known at a later date.

Fay Thomas of Giants Is Ruled Property Of Oklahoma Club

By Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Fay Thomas, young righthand pitcher of the Giants, was yesterday declared ineligible by Commissioner K. M. Landis. The commissioner ruled that Thomas is the property of the Oklahoma City club of the Western League, but that he will remain on the ineligible list until he reimburses the Giants to the extent of $2,500, which the club gave him for signing.

NEWLIN ANNEXES SHOOT TITLE

VANDALIA, O., Aug. 27.—Otto Newlin of Georgetown, Ill., former Chicago White Sox pitcher, won the Grand American Handicap at the amateur trap shooting range here yesterday. Newlin annexed the laurels by defeating C. H. Reynolds of Royal Oak, Mich., 22 to 21, in the shoot-off after they had tied at 95 targets. Newlin shot at 20 yards and Reynolds at 16.

Of the Pennsylvania entrants, S. H. Holland of Beuna Vista was best with 96. C. N. Shepard led the Pittsburgh district entrants with a 94. The scores of other Pittsburgh shooters:

The North Boroughs Church League All-Stars were to have played at Bellevue this evening, but the game was postponed that the North Boroughs nine might continue its league warfare with the leading Beltzhoover club.

HELEN WILLS NEARS NET CROWN

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(AP.)—Only two opponents today stood between Miss Helen Wills, 21-year-old California tennis ace, and a fourth American women's championship that will carry with it undisputed world supremacy in amateur ranks.

As the result of the downfall of the defending champion, Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, yesterday, Miss Wills stood out as the dominant figure among four young survivors in today's semi-finals and ruled a strong favorite to regain the heights she held from 1922 to 1925.

In an All-California match today Miss Wills was bracketed with Miss Helen Jacobs, both from the same tennis school and same town, Berkeley. In the other semi-final Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, conqueror of Mrs. Mallory, was pitted against the youngest and last of the English stars, 16-year-old Betty Nuthall.

BOBBY JONES

vived to take the slap, as the boys in the back room put it.

But, of course, Evans is a thorough sportsman and that type of individual neither concedes himself nor the opponent the victory until it actually is achieved. Therefore Evans, himself a former champion on two previous occasions, probably would rather wait until the referee counts his 10 before admitting that even Jones can't be beaten.

As a matter of fact Jones can be beaten. This was proved in the finals last year when George von Elm consistently took the play away from him, the national open and British champion, to win the amateur title in the final round. Yes, of course, Jones can be beaten; and usually it is done on the day when Jones is not actually Jones.

Such might be the case if Evans happened to be the great Chick of 1916, who shot that great 286 to win the national open over the same course. But, then, even that Chick might catch Bobby when he was the Jones who shot the world's record of 285 at St. Andrews to win the last British open championship.

Evans, as said, is not the man he was. Still he was good enough here to outlast all other competitors to get his shot at Jones. But it remained an open question this morning whether Evans is a better golfer than Francis Ouimet. That being the case, what of Ouimet's astounding performance in being able to win only one hole in 26 contested with Jones yesterday?

BUGS BAER Says

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

THE Asiatic beetle has been chewing up our finest grass this summer, thereby causing great anguish among the farmers who harvest their crops with a niblick.

Arthur "Bugs" Baer

The Asiatic beetle is an imported bug who is so busy chewing on both ends that he has to laugh in the middle.

He is a grass buzzard who gobbles the clover on putting greens and makes the usual midiron orator simmer down to a raving maniac.

Putting greens are very important in golf, if you get that far.

There should be grass on putting greens. But the grass should not be too long. No golfer wants to lose a putt in the rough.

The Asiatic beetle doesn't care much about golf or golfers. But he does like to nibble grass. The result is, when an Asiatic beetle gets through with a golf tournament, the green is baldheaded.

A bald-skulled golfer is a natural hazard and to be expected in a game where contestants currycomb each other with midirons. But a baldheaded green makes a very sour panorama and curdles the horizon.

So the golfers have asked the government to do something about it. This is all right, because a government expects to be blamed for everything, from floods down to taxes and beetles.

So the government imported the Mongolian wasp, which knows all about golf and is willing to pay dues.

The Mongolian wasp is the deadly enemy of the Asiatic beetle, which not only follows out the general tenor of a golf links, but is also expected to eliminate the Asiatic beetle from the tournament.

And that is what happened. The Mongolian wasp starts out to play with the Asiatic beetle and comes back alone. He chews the whiskers right off the beetle. Now, there are no beetles, but plenty of wasps.

These wasps don't eat grass. Having lived on beetles their taste is not vegetarian. They go in for birds, small rodents and caddies.

The golfers are afraid to ask the government to import an insect to whip the Mongolian wasp because they are afraid the new eliminator will cultivate a taste for golfers.

It's one thing after another in golf. And when you add them up it's two. The beetle is gone, but the wasp is here and adding to the golf membership at the progression of 6,000,000 new wasps an hour.

The only cure for the Mongolian wasp is the Sahara sand flea, but there is no chance of his getting imported. After watching the wasp hang up new bogie records for destruction the golfers wish that they had their good old Asiatic beetles back again.

ON "BRIDES AND COMMON SENSE."

Some BRIDES think that
When their HUSBANDS
Fail to come home
To them right on the
DOT, that they must be
DEAD. This, of course,
Is FUNNY,
But not to them.
BRIDES, as a rule, are
Invariably very SURE
Of themselves,
And their POWER to PLEASE. Yet, many
Are AMUSING without Knowing it. They take
EVERYTHING so SERIOUSLY.

BRIDES have no need of a
Sense of HUMOR,
For love, in its first
Ecstasies, never LAUGHS.
It is only after
PEOPLE HAVE been MARRIED
Quite LONG that they see
Something FUNNY
In love. But when a
WIFE realizes there are
OTHER
Things than DEATH
That will keep her HUSBAND
From her, she must have
SENSE of some kind,
And the COMMONER that
Sense is, the BETTER.

Boost Your City

And Thus Help Yourself

Appearing daily in a prominent position on this page is a slogan—"Be a Pittsburgh Booster." In a position opposite this slogan is a daily "boost" for Pittsburgh. Each day there appears a different reason why Pittsburgh is great. Don't you think it is up to you to help to spread the gospel?

If every firm would have printed on its letterheads similar reasons for the supremacy of Pittsburgh as a center of culture, industry and civic spirit there would be created an extensive propaganda machine that would work wonders.

Why does the world always hear that the climate of California is "great"? Because every Californian says so. He doesn't say it just once and think you won't forget it. He says it all the time—in every place and on every occasion. He won't let you forget it. The "booster" has been a great help to California.

Just think of what you have to boast of. Think of Schenley Farms 20 years ago and now! Think of the "Hump" 16 years ago and now! Think of the South Hills 10 years ago and now! Think of Grant street a year ago and now! Think of building construction in two years and projected construction.

Think of everything and be a Pittsburgh BOOSTER.

Two More Ships Needed

The United States Lines, belonging to the Shipping Board, in the last 12 months have made a profit of $371,000.

They did this operating five vessels in the North Atlantic passenger trade. Only one of these steamers, the Leviathan, was a modern passenger ship, capable of really competing with the great floating palaces of the English and French lines.

Now the Shipping Board wants Congress to build it two more 40,000-ton ships as companions to the Leviathan, so that a weekly service can be maintained.

Congress should buy these ships, for we need them to carry our passengers and our goods in time of peace, and to serve as naval auxiliaries in time of war. They can be built for half the cost of a warship of corresponding size.

The boy in the cartoon on this page deserves a bigger gun. The United States Lines deserve the two additional ships they ask for.

Time to Speed Study of Best Way to Save the Oil Reserve

Every far-sighted American producer of oil is aware of the perils, to himself and to society, in the wasteful methods now common in that industry.

He knows that exhaustion of our oil supply would inflict severer hardship on this nation than almost any other disaster which could be conceived.

Improvident use of our forests has been bad. But cut-over land can in time yield new growth of trees. Water, falling idly, is a waste; in angry flood, its destructiveness may be appalling. But streams are replenished through evaporation and rainfall. Thus, the water-power waste of today may be remedied in a wiser tomorrow.

Not so with wasted oil. The supply of this prime necessity—so vital in transport on land, on water, in the air; so useful and convenient in the heating of our homes—once gone, is gone FOREVER.

None know this better than the intelligent men at the head of our great oil development enterprises. They have abundant reason to realize the folly in stripping our limited and already depleted oil reserve by insensate competition, with its enforced wastes in processes and its dangerous depression of prices. They, too, as keenly as any, want more prudence in their business.

Their plight, however, is almost precisely parallel with that of our railroads a generation ago.

The railroads were slowly committing suicide by rate-cutting or rebating. The wiser executives knew it but could find no way to restrain their more stupid colleagues. What saved the carriers was federal regulation, fought by shorter-sighted railway heads at the time, now recognized as invaluable.

Similar action by the government to save the eleven-billion-dollar American oil industry, with its 1,500,000 stockholders and its many millions of consumers, has become an equally urgent duty.

It should be undertaken by the next Congress. It is not too soon for the wiser minds in the industry and those who will lead in legislation to begin a mutual study of how the necessary regulation may best be shaped to protect alike the private and the public interest.

The Patriotic Skeeter

Reader, spare that skeeter! The next time you raise your hand in deadly wrath at a buzzing little culex cantator (or even only a culex serratus), remember that some of their hardy forbears, one quiet evening 150 years ago, saved Gen. Washington's army and, incidentally, what is now New York.

This bit of history is vouched for by no less an authority than John W. Dobbins, chief inspector of the Essex County (N. J.) Mosquito Extermination Commission. Mr. Dobbins comes truly enough, not to praise the skeeter, but to bury him—with all honor due to a patriot, one supposes.

Washington's army was encamped at Morristown. The British, advancing under cover of night from Elizabeth Town (now Elizabeth) for a surprise attack that would have wiped out the Continentals, were set upon by a hostile horde of patriotic Jersey mosquitoes who smote the redcoats hip and thigh. Sorely stung, the British returned to their quarters, and gave Washington time to meet and vanquish them at Connecticut Farms.

Ah, well, "republics are ungrateful," and annoyed Americans probably will continue to swat the mosquito, as long as there's a red-blooded man left!

Mind and Ether

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

SO FAR from agreeing with the Einsteinians, who affirm that there is no such thing as the ether, Sir Oliver Lodge considers that the ether is the link between the mental and the material. Mind, ether, and matter, he affirms, interact, and whether in health or in disease a study of these three, and of the methods and details of their interaction, must be undertaken before any science of humanity can be complete.

Addressing the International Homeopathic Congress in London in July, Sir Oliver suggested that the followers of those who discovered the principle of similia similibus curantur (like is cured by like), should be the first to realize and apply to the human body discoveries about the nature of matter and its relation to the ether of space.

"For," he said, "our bodies are not composed of matter alone, nor of the separate particles which we can see and handle, but they are united by a material mechanism, which may be spoken of as an etheric body."

This is in line with his views about the survival of a form of the body after death. This surviving form that continues the individual existence is the "etheric body."

Sir Oliver himself avows that the mechanism of the relationship between mind and matter has not yet even begun to be explored. His idea is purely a working hypothesis, without at present any verified evidence to stand upon, but he believes it is right, nevertheless.

Not only is the action of mind upon matter indirect and "conducted through a concealed mechanism which makes no appeal to the senses," but he would go further and assert that the action of matter on matter is also indirect, and as long as the ether is ignored such action can never be fundamentally understood.

In ignoring the ether, he says, we may be ignoring the fundamental reality in the physical universe, and that which constitutes the physical vehicle of life and mind. His idea is that life and mind may have no direct association with matter, but only an indirect one through the medium of the ether.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY.

Something for Nothing

IF you accept favors you must expect to reciprocate.

Once in a while you may find a person who does not expect something in return for favors.

Such persons are rare.

In fact, it is safe to figure that for a favor extended as much should be expected in return, or it will be, later, perhaps.

Don't be so ungrateful that you think you should accept many kindnesses without trying to reciprocate.

If you think you should just take all that comes your way without a thought, and you carry out this thought you will find yourself very unpopular.

And this is a natural result.

There are always plenty of appreciative ones who are only too glad to follow a lead in the way of courtesies.

When someone shows you a courtesy, return the kindness in some way at once, not to show that you wish to repay, but as a matter of good breeding.

Ladies and gentlemen, who are that in more than name, never wish to be under obligation to another.

MY WIFE joined in,

New York Day by Day
by
O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—New York gossip is often more vicious than that which flies across back fences of Main street. Very few men, or women either, achieve fame without being targets for scandal mongers. The greater the fame the more malicious seem the stories.

During the height of the Lindbergh celebration in New York a few months ago a pernicious tale was afloat that the young flyer had contracted an unfortunate marriage in earlier youth. These stories came from those who claimed to have the word direct from Lindbergh.

The yarn spread so rapidly that two big news gathering organizations assigned six crack investigators to trail the story to earth. In three days they discovered its utter falsity and source. It was spread by idle and malicious gossipers.

Actors and actresses of prominence on stage and screen are frequent marks of maligners. These stories are often so vicious they would become unprintable even if true. It has been said that in several instances such stories have driven victims to self destruction.

Financiers, too, are often singled out for villification. These calumnies are sometimes spread by blackmailers who hope to aid their schemes. But in the main, the sinister stories are tattled by those who get some unholy satisfaction out of gossip.

Broadway has often been called Scandal street, yet it pays less attention to tales of infamy than other sections. It has heard so many and found them untrue. Consequently it believes none of them as a rule. In its own fashion it "laughs them off."

Much of the scandal that seems to be attached to the social rich has been found to be the result of below-stair gossip of servants by expert investigators.

* * *

They were discussing sundry topics in a Broadway souse shed. An old rounder who had tried marriage unsuccessfully five times took no part in the conversation until someone spoke of the beauties of Rome. Then he spoke. "Rome," he sighed, "there's a spot — the men fiddle while the women burn."

* * *

In one of the little cellar theaters where audiences sit on benches, the curtain refused to slide the other evening. There were frantic tugs and finally a nervous announcer appeared and said: "Please keep your seats. The play will go on."

"Must it?" piped a weak voice.

These thimble theaters furnish amusement in their worthy struggles, yet they have given Broadway six distinctive hits. But for them it is possible the world might not yet have heard of two of its greatest dramatists. Players, as a rule, work for a slim slice of receipts. The producer often sells tickets, acts as stage hand, plays a minor role and afterward sweeps out the hall for the next performance.

A confetcioner in the theatrical district says caramels are the favorite candies of theatergoers. We used to call it "chewing candy."

First avenue's harsh drabness is being softened above Fortieth street with a number of imposing apartment houses for the so-called middle classes. They will be moderate priced for working girls and men with families. The buildings tower above their surroundings and overlook the river and tennis courts, swimming pools and other recreative diversions will be offered.

Joy riding warning along a Westchester road: "Liquor and gasoline do not mix." That is true. Most of the bootleggers use either varnish or hair oil.

Motion Pictures

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Southern California is probably the best known region in the world.

In London, in France, in Budapest and in Peking people are familiar with the landscape of this region. They know the kind of houses that are built and the way the country looks.

They did not learn this out of books and their teachers did not tell them about it. They learned it in the best way people learn anything, by their amusement.

The whole world now goes to motion pictures. It is the latest and it is the most popular form of amusement in the world and more than ninety per cent of all the motion pictures made are created in Southern California.

This costs a lot of money.

The money comes from almost four billion people yearly going to picture shows and paying on an average of 35 cents per person or a little over one billion dollars.

And this money is mostly invested in Hollywood. Sixty-seven million dollars annually is spent for engraving and advertising.

The amount of profit on films is estimated at almost $2,000,000,000, and the investment in the industry is $2,500,000,000.

Ranking the fourth largest industry in the United States, it is the center of the ambitions of thousands of people.

This calling employs an immense army of people, many of them in production, thousands of musicians in the 20,000 theaters where films are shown, and the business gives employment to an army of extras.

These extras are managed by casting officials.

All of the casting is done under the direction of Dave Allen, who 11 years ago originated the idea of a casting office in Hollywood. He is at the head of a bureau controlling an army of extras. Anyone can come in and apply, but no one is guaranteed work.

All sorts and conditions of people are required, such, for instance, as fat men in running pants, gypsy girls, Russian dancers, white babies and their mothers, automobile drivers, college boys, lumber jacks, dance hall girls, tenement dwellers, Chinese, old men in rubber coats and men to dress as American soldiers, old Negro mammies, and so on.

In fact, almost all sorts and types of people are required. Their employment is very precarious, but some of them manage to make a living out of it.

That the industry is more than a passing amusement fad is indicated by the fact that both Columbia University and Harvard University have adopted motion pictures in their course of study, and a library is being created at Harvard.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Woman's World

SILKS and satins and laces frail, music that never tires, dancing feet 'til the stars grow pale, these are her heart's desires. Sheen of the sun on a bluebird's wings, joy of the seagull's flight, light and lovely and shining things, these are her heart's delight. Eyes that glow when her step draws near, arms that are opened wide, lips that murmur, "I love you, Dear!" thus is she satisfied . . . Toiling at morning, at noon, at eve, toiling through song-swept days, smiling at toil lest another grieve, this is the part she plays. Comforting, cherishing, leading on ever to higher goals, visioning hope after hope seems gone, joyful in life's small doles; laughing with children and healing all little hearts' griefs and aches, bringing the light where no sunbeams fall, this is the world she makes.

THE LIFE OF THOMAS A. EDISON

(Authorized and Endorsed by Mr. Edison)

Text by Arthur J. Palmer
Drawings by Frank Kuchenmeister

MARSHALL LEFFERTS gave Edison his check for $40,000 and sent an assistant to the bank with him for identification purposes. The teller, being a practical joker, gave Edison the entire amount in small bills. The young inventor laboriously stuffed them into every pocket, then sat up all night to guard his new fortune.

FROM the "cup of tea breakfast" to financial independence reads almost like a fairy tale. With his $40,000 Edison opened a factory at Newark, N. J., and started his twenty-hours-a-day working schedule. He took a half-hour nap on a workbench three or four times out of the twenty-four and worked hard in between times.

EDISON'S greatest telegraphic achievement was the quadruplex, which permits two messages to go each way over a single wire at the same time. Edison sold out his "quad" interests to Jay Gould in the basement of Gould's Fifth avenue home. To avoid spying competitors Edison entered by the servants' entrance.

EDISON turned his talents from the telegraph to messenger call boxes, then to the electric pen, then to the typewriter. He helped to make the latter commercially practical, following the mechanism involving the principles of Carlos Glidden and Christopher L. Sholes. An early model of a typewriter appears above.
